Farmers anxiously wait for sunshine, planting opportunities as rain continues

The 2018 planting season came to a halt again last week when showers returned to southern Minnesota.

According to crop progress and condi $tions \, reports \, released \, Monday, corn \, planting$ is 40 percent completed statewide this year, five days behind last year and eight days behind the five-year average.

Soybeans, at 11 percent planted, are four days behind last year and nine days behind average.

Agronomists are advising growers to stick with planting full-season corn hybrids for another couple of weeks, before thinking about moving to earlier corn hybrids, wrote Kent Thiesse in his weekly "Focus On Ag" column.

Research from the University of Minnesota has shown that corn planted on May 25 in southern Minnesota averaged over 90 percent of the yield from corn planted from April 25 to May 10 of the same year. Corn yield potential declines rapidly for corn planted after June 1.

The planting window for soybeans is much wider than it is for corn in southern Minnesota. Full season soybean varieties can be planted until late May or early June with only minimal reductions in yield potential.

Thiesse reminded growers that similar wet conditions were experienced in 2014.

Planting conditions took until May 25 to reach 81 percent of the corn planted and to June 1 to exceed 90 percent. The result was a statewide average of 156 bushels an acre.

Weather conditions for the next ten days will determine how serious the corn and soybeans planting delays will become, Thiesse concluded.

Fields like this one just west of Luverne need more sunshine and less rain in order for spring planting to resume. So far, local farmers are staying the course with plans for planting full season hybrids.

Luverne's Take 16 Brewing Company will open its events center next week with a ribbon-cutting and open house May 24.

The 140-person capacity room accommodates a variety of gatherings, from bridal showers to graduations. Smaller gatherings are already popular in the tap room, which holds nearly 50 people at a time.

There are five graduation parties booked in the room already this spring, and 25 events from June through December this year.

The space, which once served as the Connell Car Care service garage, has a ping pong table, bean bag toss games and a quality speaker system to connect with personal playlists.

Take 16 event coordinator Kim VonTersch said she's already booking events for next year.

The locally crafted beer is available to parties who can cater food in or set up their own serving areas with their own food.

Poverty trainees 'graduate' from Blandin program

By Lori Sorenson

Local volunteers with Leaders Partnering to End Poverty celebrated a milestone Thursday night when the Blandin Foundation "graduated" w them from training.

"The movement we've already seen has been significant," said Ed Zabinski, a trainer with Blandin. "We haven't seen this much action this fast in other communities."

Luverne is the sixth community to participate in the Blandin Foundation poverty series, which creates awareness of poverty's effects on families and communities, and guides local leaders and volunteers toward solutions.

About two dozen interested Luverne residents began  $meeting \, last \, fall \, as \, #Luv1LuvAll, \, and \, they've \, learned \, about$ the numbers and the people affected.

And they've involved the community by workshops and listening to those who have experienced poverty.

Jodi Pfarr, who grew up poor in South Minneapolis, shared her experience last fall about how hard it is to escape poverty.

"Poverty isn't about individual decisions," she told a group gathered at Grand Prairie Events in Luverne.

"How many times have you heard, 'If they would work harder or budget better, there wouldn't be poverty."

She talked about what it's like to live without or car or a savings account, and she emphasized the importance of recognizing classes and communicating across them.

"True change can take hold when individuals and communities apply this new understanding," Pfarr said.

The #Luv1LuvAll group also hosted a dinner theatre performance in January to illustrate that poverty isn't only about "haves" and "have-nots," and many poor families also experience unfair and hurtful stereotypes.

In return, Luverne leaders committed to attending all seven training sessions and to attend as many community events as their schedule allowed.

By fall the Blue Mounds State Park will have a consistent supply of drinkable water for the first time in four years.

Rock County Commissioners accepted the lowest bid Tuesday, May 8, from Henning Construction Inc. at $450,481 for the three miles of pipeline to connect the park to the Rock County Rural Water System.

Engineers had estimated $485,000 for the project.

Darin Schriever with DGR Engineering out of Rock Rapids, Iowa, is the project manager.

In his recommendation letter, Schriever indicated Henning was an acceptable choice.

"DGR Engineering has not worked with Henning Construction Inc. on rural water projects in the past; however, they are a local contractor that has worked with counties and municipalities in the area," Schriever wrote. "They are a reputable contractor and appear capable of successfully completing the project."

Three bids were opened April 27 with only two bids accepted by the engineers.

A full roster of 40 people had appointments for Moran to appraise everything from Native American artifacts to instruments to paintings.

Many items didn't have financial value, but given their family histories, most were priceless.

Tanya Light had a set of matching framed tiger paintings that her father, Jim Leicher, brought back from Korea after he served there in the war. The prints — gouache paint on silk — were valued at nearly $200 each.

Below, Ruth Barber brought in a framed Claude Monet painting that turned out to be a reproduction valued at less than $10.

In the inset, Moran examines a bride doll for a signature.

At left, Jean Svendsen had a four-piece ruby glass set that her grandma had given to her mother 120 years ago. Because ruby glass is so common, it was valued less than $150, but Moran encouraged Svendsen to enjoy it as a treasured family heirloom.

Wilma Elbers had a tea set from the Netherlands that her grandmother had given to her as a small child. It was appraised at $40.

Library applies for broadband grant

Luverne Public Schools will contribute an additional $10,000 toward the boys' and girls' hockey program for the next five years.

Board members ap proved the agreement with the Luverne Hockey Club Inc. at their May 10 regular meeting.

The agreement is from July 1, 2018, to June 30, 2023.

Both parties entered into an agreement in 1998 in order to compete in the interscholastic hockey program operated by the Minnesota State High School League.

Under the original agreement, the club picked up all expenses associated with the high school hockey program.

Total expenses for the high school activity totaled $61,000 for the 2017-2018 season, according to club representative Pat Von Tersch who supplied the information to board members at a workshop meeting

Last year the school agreed to pay the boys' and girls' head and assistant coaches' salaries totaling $19,000.

Last year the club paid $42,000 toward the winter sport offering.

During the workshop, Von Tersch proposed balancing the expenses between the school and the club.

In the new agreement, the school agrees to supply school bus transportation for the team and coaches to all high school league scrimmages, games and tournaments not to exceed $10,000. Transportation expenses beyond $10,000 during the season would be the club's responsibility.

The Rock County Library is hoping to be one of four communities selected for the Blandin Broadband Community's two-year project for 2018-2020.

"The county has highspeed Internet so now what do we do with it," said library director Calla Jarvie.

BBC works with a local steering committee to develop technology goals, measure the current levels of broadband access and use, and seek tech $nical\,ass is tance\, and\, resources$ to meet their goals.

The library was asked to take the lead in the application process due to its focus of serving the public through sharing of information on a county level.

Rock County Commissioners voted May 8 to include a letter of support in the grant application due at the end of this month.

"The library is the nucleus of the community with the county being a resource," said Commissioner Jody Reisch, who also serves on the library board.

The county recently com pleted a fiber-to-the-premise project that brought access to high speed Internet to all county residents outside the city of the Luverne. Luverne already had access to a highspeed Internet service.

"We thought we would be a great fit with the program because we have access to broadband countywide already," Jarvie said. "Through the grant we can teach them what to do with the Internet."

As part of the program, the library would be eligible for a matching grant from Blandin for up to $75,000.

The BBC began in 2013. If selected, the library would begin the program in August.

Child care shortage on agenda — again

Senator's staff meets with local leaders about child care shortage

By Lori Sorenson

Greater Minnesota's child care shortage was on the agenda when U.S. Sen. Tina Smith's staff was in Luverne last week to meet with local parents, providers, advocates and employers.

They met with a room full of local voices on the issue city and county leaders, child care providers, non-profit organizations and others.

Mayor Pat Baustian provided background on Rock County's child care shortage for Smith's staff.

"This is directly affecting the economic development opportunities in Luverne," he said. "When companies come to Luverne, where are their employees going to find day care? How are we going to keep those employers here or be able to allow them to grow?'

He pointed to a Maxfield Research Study that the city commissioned two years ago. "We knew there was a problem, but we were astounded by the shortage," he said.

In 2016 the study recorded 51 local child care providers, but 111 child care slots were still needed. Since then the number of providers has dropped to 34, thereby increasing the local child care need exponentially.

With Luverne's Economic Development Authority and the Luverne Area Community Foundation leading the way, a series of meetings over the past few months have helped to gather information about the primary problems and possible solutions.

"This community has never had a child care center," said LACF director Emily Crabtree. "We've looked at that for 25 years and can't come up with a model that works."

In conversations with local family child care providers, she learned that the average in-home provider offers services for 5 1/2 years.

"We asked them, 'Why aren't more people staying in it longer?" Crabtree said. "We found out that they need health insurance and benefits for themselves, and the state keeps increasing regulations on their businesses."

Luverne child care provider Amber Nath has been in business for over 13 years, and she said rules and regulations continue to get tougher.

"That's why we're seeing more people get out of day care," Nath told Smith's staff members Thursday.

"I think providers are crazy to get into it anymore. ... I like to have fun with my kids, but I don't think it's fun with all the rules and regulations. ... My concern is my kids and their health and happiness, not the paperwork.

She pointed out that many providers are open 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. or longer, and they're not able to do their paperwork during their child care hours, so the extra regulations and training put more pressure on their personal time.

"I think providers are crazy to get into it anymore. ... I like to have fun with my kids, but I don't think it's fun with all the rules and regulations."

— Amber Nath in-home child care provider, Luverne

"We're starting to see child care as a necessity — like roads, water, library and the pool. Without child care, we won't see the growth that's possible. People will opt to live

somewhere else."

Discussion at Thursday's meeting also focused briefly on child care for low-income families, and extra paperwork that's generated for providers who serve working families on public assistance.

"It's easier not to take them at all, and that's not fair to those kids," she said, adding that many of her colleagues also share that sentiment.

Gov. Mark Dayton has proposed universal preschool to improve learning and stability for families of all incomes, but child care providers say that would further harm their businesses.

"We don't make money on our infants and toddlers, so if you take away that age group, you're taking away our primary source of income," Nath said.

Some at Thursday's discussion pointed to collaborations between child care providers and Head Start, as a possible way to share those preschoolers.

The May 10 meeting in the Herreid Board Room of the Rock County Veterans Memorial Building was part of Smith's statewide "Child Care Access and Affordability" tour of Minnesota communities experiencing shortages.

"One thing we've really recognized throughout the state is that each community is different and their needs are different," Senator Smith's staff member Bree Maki said. "So in some communities, centers work great, especially in bigger communities, but in smaller communities, it isn't always feasible."

Minnesota's strict regulations for child care providers appear to be a primary factor affecting the decreasing numbers of outstate providers, but Smith is pressing legislation in Congress to make child care more accessible and affordable.

Among options under consideration is a child tax credit that could be available to families whose children are enrolled in a licensed child care facility.

Local Minnesota lawmakers are also pressing for legislation to relieve regulatory pressure on child care providers.

Meanwhile, the community is preparing to welcome tru Shrimp to Luverne with 100 jobs starting later next year. That means the race is on to find a child care solution for working families.

Another idea that surfaced last week was the likely possibility of a public-private child care center that would involve subsidizing the profit

"We're starting to see child care as a necessity — like roads, water, library and the pool," Crabtree said. "Without child care, we won't see the growth that's possible. People will opt to live somewhere else."

Luverne airport to get new above-ground jet fuel tank

By Lori Sorenson

Luverne City Council members approved the plans and specifications for the 2018 airport fuel system expansion project at their May 8 meeting.

The project includes putting in a new fuel tank system for the airport that will replace an old, obsolete system that is becoming a liability.

According to Councilman Kevin Aaker, who also serves on the airport board, the above-ground tank has a solid construction that won't presentissues for groundwater safety.

He said the former tank was becoming "glitchy" and difficult to use.

The new fuel system will provide both jet fuel and aviation fuel on an island that will be located just to the north of the airport lounge area. The new fuel system funding has been approved by both the Federal Aviation Administration and the Minnesota State Department of Transportation.

Federal and state agencies will provide 95 percent of the funding of the project that is estimated to be in the range of $500,000.

Tuesday's action authorizes the advertisement for bids, and a bid opening date is set for June 5.

Progress continues on Roundwind twin homes

Grading for Cleveringa's lots is being fulfilled by a separate contract between Cleveringa and Hulstein.

Rough grading for the pond is complete and all that is left for grading is some touchup work with a skid loader.

Hulstein returned to the site last week to begin work on the storm sewer water and sanitary sewer services.

City gives $15,000 to help promote Pheasant Opener

By Lori Sorenson

Luverne City Council members agreed to contribute $15,000 to help promote the community during the 2018 Minnesota Governor's Pheasant Hunting Opener.

Luverne was selected as the host city for this year's opener, which is Oct. 12-13, and a local committee has been working to prepare for it.

Rick Peterson, Luverne, chairs the committee and approached the City Council at the April 17 meeting.

"The DNR and Explore Minnesota estimate it will bring in $835,000 worth of advertising exposure for the community," Peterson told council members at that meeting.

"It's not about the bird harvest, it's about the exposure."

The city's contribution he said could be considered advertising dollars spent at home, rather than paying to promote the community to outside areas.

At Tuesday's meeting May 8, the council took action to approve that request.

"I'm so excited for all that's to come this fall," councilwoman Carolyn Thorson said. "It will be a great opportunity to showcase this little corner of the state, and I look forward to all the good things that will come as a result of the event." The official action at the

May 8 meeting was to approve the activity coordination agreement between the city of Luverne and the Luverne Area Chamber of Commerce to promote the community and the event.

Peterson updated the council on a tentative agenda for the Pheasant Hunting Opener weekend.

It includes a land dedication of 100 new wildlife management acres, Bison Buggy tours at the state park, photographer Jim Brandenburg at Touch the Sky Prairie, trapshooting at the Sportsman's Club, youth events, live music at Take 16, a bird dog parade, The Locals in concert at the Palace and more.

"The actual hunting part of the weekend is only a couple of hours," Petersen said.

"The rest is about promoting Luverne."

In addition to support from the city of Luverne, Peterson said his committee has secured donations from local businesses and organizations and from corporate sponsorships.

Rural Water connects to Blue Mounds State park/from page 1A

bonding bill passed last year by legislators.

Besides bringing rural water to the park, the bonding bill would also upgrade the park's 40-year-old waterline infrastructure. Park manager Chris Ingebretson said state engineers have finished the pipeline design that would merge the park's current two water systems together. However, the project won't be sent out for bids until more funding is secured. While no estimates were released, upgrading the 1.25 miles of infrastructure were above the current funding level, he said.

"If it's not done and in place by the time rural water is done and in place, we can send that water through the existing infrastructure," Ingebretson said.

He is optimistic that the funding will be made available to complete the project.

As for construction of the  $rural\,water\,pipeline\,to\,the\,park,$ Henning will begin work this spring with completion set for this fall.

Construction is about 12 weeks, depending on the severity of the rock formations and weather conditions.

Henning will also connect the rural water and park systems together.

Their $19,600 bid was also the lowest. Duininck's bid was $29,805.

Since 2014 the park's drinking water has tested positive for fecal coliform. Attempts to clean the system and the installation of a new 330-foot well didn't eliminate the E.coli from the system.

The park has been open since the contamination, with visitors given bottled water and advised not to use the showers.

As a result of a feasibility study last fall, connecting to rural water was found to be the best solution to the park's wateri ssues.

Happy Mother's Day to all the daughters who have become their mothers

There's nothing quite like being a mom to turn you into your own mother.

older I get and the older my children get, the more I see and hear my mother in my house.

Mostly I sound like her. "House cleaning is thankless work," I heard myself say last week. "Tomorrow I can do it all over again, and no one will notice unless it isn't done."

I hear myself at times say, "Someday we'll look back at this and laugh." Mom's phrase is more often, "This, too, shall pass."

And I'm pretty sure we've both often repeated, "Things could always be worse," and "Look at the bright side ..."

But there's nothing like talking to my children to really put Mom's words in my mouth.

"How can you be so smart and yet do something so dumb!?" was one of her favorite expressions. ... Or maybe I just heard it more often than anyone else in my family.

And there was also, "That is not how I raised you." (I still hear that one sometimes.)

We observed Mother's Day Sunday, and it prompted a few other recollections of things moms say.

• "Put a smile on your face, no one will notice what you're wearing." Lots of things can be inserted in the second part of the phrase, like a zit on your chin or a bad hair day.

'We all do better when we all do better'

Over the past several months, more than two-dozen local volunteers have been grappling with the concept of poverty in our com-

We're a community abundant with blessings and with generous people, but poverty does exist, and those in its grips are in a daily struggle to escape it.

What we've learned through our #Luv1LuvAll volunteers is that poverty, left unaddressed, can eat away at the core of a community's vitality, and the Star Herald has been learning along with everyone else what this means.

In Rock County more than 9 percent of its 9,000 people live below the poverty line, according to the website Minnesota Compass, and many of them are children.

#Luv1LuvAll has been considering the nearly 900 Rock County citizens living in poverty and putting faces on the numbers.

And they've involved the community by workshops and listening to those who have experienced poverty.

Anyone who's been part of those processes knows that poverty isn't something to be ignored.

STAR HERALD EDITORIAL

The easy choice is to ignore it, but kudos to our local committees who have been plugging away through the Blandin Foundation's training for Leaders Partnering to End Poverty. And kudos to Blandin for funding it.

In fact, the real work is just beginning. We have five local groups - subcommittees of determined and motivated local volunteers — who are quietly working on their own assignments to improve the lives of those affected by poverty. They are:

We believe that, too.

Speed's a leading factor in motorcycle crashes; tinted windows need documentation

Question: Can you talk about motorcycle safety?

Answer: With spring upon us and motorcycles once again sharing the highways, this is a great time to provide motorcycle crash facts and safety tips. We currently have had two fatal motorcycle crashes this year.

In Minnesota over half of motorcycle crashes are singlevehicle crashes. Motorcycle use is at an all-time high, and the two primary factors involved when they crash are driver inexperience and speed.

One main reason that motorcyclists are killed in crashes is because the motorcycle itself provides virtually no protection. The occupant protection built into our passenger cars protects us greatly but cannot be incorporated within a motorcycle.

•Nationwide, 80 percent of reported motorcycle crashes result in injury or death; a comparable figure for automobiles is only 20 percent.

•Nationwide, 25 percent of motorcycle operators killed in crashes are not licensed or are improperly licensed to operate a motorcycle.

Approximately half of all fatal single-vehicle motorcycle crashes involved alcohol. Driving a motorcycle requires more skill and coordination than driving most other upright by yourself. A motorcycle must be the right fit for the person and the style of the cycle should fit the user. Because serious head injury is common among fatally injured motorcyclists, helmet use is important. Helmets are about 37 percent effective in preventing motorcycle deaths and about 67 percent effective in preventing brain All motorists are reminded Question: Would law enforcement give me a citation if I have a prescription, from my eye doctor, saying that I get migraine headaches from intense lighting and my truck windows can be tinted to 20 percent on driver and passenger windows, for no more than two years?

Answer: Drivers must be in possession of a prescription or document from their doctor regarding the medical need to have tinted windows below the 50 percent light transmittance, plus or minus 3 percent. If they don't have the required documentation with them, a law enforcement officer may issue a citation.

The document must state the minimum percentage of light transmittance that would satisfy the patient's prescription or medical needs. The document must also contain an expiration date that is no more than two years after the prescription or statement was issued.

If the window tint is below the state minimum of 50 percent light transmittance, a law enforcement officer may stop the vehicle since the officer will not be aware of the medical exemption.

In Minnesota, you can have your windows tinted to a light transmittance of 50 percent but not less. Light transmittance is the amount of light that is required to pass through both the window and the tint film. Vehicles come from the factory with tint already inside the glass material. No window comes from the factory at 100 percent light transmittance. My experience has been that most vehicles are already at 75 percent before any modifications.

Below is a summary of Minnesota's window tint law:

•No vehicle can have ANY tint to the front windshield.

•Passenger cars are limited to 50 percent on all side and rear windows. •Pickups, vans and SUVs are limited to 50 percent on the front side windows. •Pickups, vans and SUVs are not limited on the rear side and rear windows. It can be less than 50 percent behind the front seat.

·Squad cars, limousines and vehicles used to transport human remains by a funeral establishment are not limited on the side and rear windows.

Most troopers have window tint meters in their patrol cars and will test the windows for the legal percent of light transmittance if they look to be below the statutory limit. If they are found below the legal limit, the trooper will issue a citation or warning. Prior contact data is stored in our Minnesota State Patrol computer system, and if the vehicle is stopped again, the trooper will be able to read what that vehicle was stopped for, driver and passenger information, if a citation or warning was issued and any comments entered from the previous trooper(s).

You can avoid a ticket — and a crash — if you simply buckle up, drive at safe speeds, pay attention and always drive sober. Help us drive Minnesota Toward Zero Deaths.

Luverne High School's Class of 2018 spent Friday morning completing various community service projects around Luverne as part of Senior Service Day. Students worked in small groups cleaning, straightening and organizing. For the Luverne Area Chamber, seniors help committee members Annie Opitz (far left) and Janine Papik (far right) clean and organize the "Luv the Life" banners that will be hung on Highway 75 and Luverne Main Street. Seniors included Tucker Oeltjenbruns (left), Cade Ver Steeg and Tyler Reisdorfer scrubbing the vinyl banners. Also helping were Jaxon Nelson and Dylan Mente. Anyone with an interest in addressing poverty was encouraged to participate, and ultimately 24 people completed the training.

One of the trainees, Val Saarloos, said she got involved with the effort to give back to the community. "I feel like I've had a good life," she said. "I want to see barriers broken down between class and color."

After hosting last week's poverty simulation (see related story) the group gathered Thursday, May 10, for a graduation ceremony at Grand Prairie Events in Luverne.

"They now have the leadership capacity to do this on their own," said Valerie Shangreaux, director of the Blandin leadership program.

Zabinski said he has high hopes for Luverne's success. 'The community has the resources it needs to help address poverty as long as people are aware and care," he said.

During the graduation and debriefing event, the Luverne trainees reviewed progress and organized for future tasks, which they narrowed to five priorities:

•Ensure safe, stable and affordable housing for everyone.

•Increase dental care access for the under- and uninsured.

•Increase brain health for everyone — change the stigma attached to mental illness.

•Improve access to senior nutrition.

•Remove barriers to allow easy personal access to all resources.

A similar agreement was completed with the cities of Hills and Luverne for blighted properties within their city limits. There are seven properties up for tax forfeiture this year.

The four remaining properties will be offered for public sale at 10 a.m. Wednesday, May 23, at the Rock County Courthouse.

The residential properties (two in Steen and an additional home in Hardwick) have minimum opening bids of $1. A bare lot within the city of Luverne has an opening bid of $6,200. Full payments are due at the time of the auction sale along with extra fees and costs associated with a forfeiture sale, according to the Rock County Auditor's public notice.

Earlier this year, Hardwick officials charged a property owner under the new blight ordinance. The city is in the process of removing items from the property that are not contained in the storage shed.

Cost of the cleanup will be assessed to the property.

 County Attorney C.H. Christopherson sustained an unusually severe compound fracture of his left leg just above the ankle Saturday afternoon, while attempting to get aboard an east-bound Omaha freight.

Mr. Christopherson had planned to go to Magnolia to attend a meeting of the directors of the Magnolia State bank and return on the evening passenger. When he arrived at the Cedar street end of the station platform, the train had obtained a two-block start for the Jones hill, and was moving at rather a high rate of speed.

As the rear end of the caboose approached Mr. Christopherson ran alongside the train for a short distance grasped the caboose-steps railing, and jumped. His feet struck the steps of the car, but he did not obtain a secure enough hold on the railing for the momentum of the train, and the next instant he was hurled to the ground, and rolled over several times.

1952: Guard members are coming home

The following appeared in the Rock County Star Herald on July 3, 1952.

Members Of The 47th Division Are Due To Be Discharged Soon To Release Men By Point System After August 15

Best news to reach Rock county this week was the word that the local national guard unit members are coming home.

Plans for the release of all Minnesota and North Dakota National Guardsmen still with the 47th "Viking" Infantry Division at Camp Rucker, Alabama have been drawn up, announced the Division G - I office this week.

In accordance with present department of army policies, it is contemplated that guard enlisted men will be phased out in five equal monthly groups after August 15, 1952.

Sixty-five officers and men from Rock county and adjacent area were with the local headquarters company when it left Luverne on January 24, 1951. The division had been activated on January 16, 1951, on order of President Truman.

Point System Used

BITS BY BETTY

By Betty Mann, president Rock County Historical Society

To determine priority for release, a point system has been set up for the discharges.

According to the system, one point will be allowed for each month of active service in the United States; two points for each month overseas in War II or in Korea; and five points for each dependent.

Many of the guardsmen have seen service in World War II including overseas duty.

Those with the highest total points will be phased out first unless they express the desire to remain on active duty up to the completion of the 24-month tour which ends January 16, 1953.

Of the original 9,000 guardsmen in the division, many have been rotated overseas or discharged, including some enlisted men and officers from Rock county. Officers will Remain

Guard officers will probably remain on duty for a full 24-month period of duty. The release from the division G-I office does not specify when and if officers are included in the point system, but they indicate that they will be with the 47th until it completes its 24 month period of January 16, 1953.

The number of eligible men for discharge under the point system was not revealed by the division G - I so there is no way of knowing how large the five equal monthly groups will be.

Donations to the Rock County Historical Society can be sent to the Rock County Historical Society, 312 E. Main Street, Luverne, MN 56156.

Documentary sheds light on teenagers, phone usage

By Mavis Fodness

A 70-minute documentary titled "Screenagers" focuses on today's young people and the intensity they have into reading their cell phone screens or playing video games.

"Screenagers" is a 2016 awardwinning documentary that probes into family life of director Delaney Ruston and other parents who struggle with balancing their teens' time using social media, playing video games, completing academics and the potential for Internet addiction.

A free showing of the documentary will take place at 7 p.m. Tuesday, May 22, in the Luverne Middle-High School media center.

The film offers solutions on how to help kids navigate in the digital world.

On average, today's youth spend 6.5 hours a day looking at screens, according to the documentary. This amount doesn't include time spend doing homework. Often learning time is sacrificed in order to spend more time on social media or playing video games.

Various experts explain the negative toll on young people's minds if they spend too much time in front of screens.

'Teenagers need to understand why they need to put the phone down and pay attention," said Sherry Turkle, MIT professor of psychology. "Thinking they can multitask so well and think the more they do it, the better they are at completing tasks

Of those who play video games, teenaged boys spend on average more than 11.3 hours per week, often foregoing adequate sleep, in order to play the games.

The documentary focuses on a community approach to setting use limits to technology rather than just the school's or the parents' concern.

The key is effective communi-

As one teen said in the documentary, "When my parents actually  $had \, that \, deep \, conversation, it \, works \,$ a lot better."

The 70-minute documentary will be shown free and is open to the public. Its showing is sponsored by the Sanford Luverne Physicians Donor Advisory Group.

'The physician group is aware of the national discussions related to social media and impact on teenagers," said Laurie Jensen, director of clinic operations. "They felt that it was a very worthy cause to support with grant dollars."

money with other family members and would often be overwhelmed with desperation.

As the simulation played out, the heads of households became visibly frustrated in their goal to keep their household afloat.

George Bonnema played the role of a community college student caring for his siblings while his father was in jail. He admitted that he left a runaway sibling in a jail, where at least the child would be fed. "Plus, I don't have transportation to go get him," said an exasperated Bonnema.

In another family, Julie Haugom was a 9-year-old asthmatic child with learning disabilities who was left at home to care for her 1-year-old niece while her 20-year-old sister (who lived in the home) was at work and school.

Their 40-year-old single father (Luverne High School student Michelle Kramer) works full time for $10.75 per hour and struggles with child care, schedules and finances.

Midway through the simulation, this stressedout father learned his child needs eyeglasses for $50 and is notified he must meet with his caseworker for an annual review or risk losing human services benefits. These appointments are during business hours, which meant he would have to take time off from work and find transportation to get to them.

At the end of the simulation, most of the families were in worse shape than they were when they began, and those who maintained or (in the case of a few) got ahead, admitted they did so with a little extra help or act of kindness.

One family that owned a car but lost a home moved in with a neighbor who didn't have a car. In that way, the families also helped each other with child care in addition to housing and transportation.

"How many opportunities do we have to be a ray of sunshine in someone's life? What can we do in Luverne, Minnesota, to make a difference in the community?" — Debi Brandt, facilitator

When it was over, Brandt asked the families to describe in a word how they were feeling after being part of the exercise. Those words included "frustrated," "stressed," "anxious," "hopeless," "embarrassed" "angry"

Mary Lou Mulligan had played the role of a child whose family couldn't afford the fees needed for a class trip. The school offered a scholarship, but she had to accept it in front of her peers. She expressed embarrassment over that.

Children in other families simply opted not to go on the field trip to avoid the embarrassment.

One family's car had been stolen, but because they couldn't speak English, they didn't community well with police who ended up doing nothing. Meanwhile, the family was still expected to make the auto loan payment when it was due. And many complained about long lines at understaffed service offices, which sometimes closed while people were still waiting in

Some shared that others had helped them in small ways — paying a bill for someone whose card was denied, offering a ride or caring for a child.

This, Brandt said, is what the simulation was all about.

"How many opportunities do we have like that to be a ray of sunshine in someone's life?" she said. "What can we do in Luverne, Minnesota, to make a difference in the community?"

That question prompted small solutions from volunteers in the room: check on an elderly neighbor, stop at school to pay a delinquent lunch account or activity fee, offer to drive someone to an appointment.

Brandt later told the Star Herald that she was impressed by the number of volunteers and participants in Monday's simulation and by the sincere reactions afterward.

"Hopefully it will lead someone to action," Brandt

'Poor people are lazy' and other myths make life more difficult for those living in poverty

People living in poverty have to make tough choices with their money all day, every day, with no room for error but plenty of judgment from others.

Many people who do not live in poverty have a tendency to criticize the poor and blame them for their laziness, lack of intelligence and bad decisions. They believe the poor must have done something to deserve

This belief helps fuel the many myths and stereotypes that negatively impact those living in poverty in the U.S. Here are just a few of them:

Myth: Poor people are unmotivated and have weak work ethics.

Reality: Although poor people are often stereotyped as lazy, two-thirds of people living in poverty work an average of 1.7 jobs; 83 percent of children from low-income families have at least one employed parent; and close to 60 percent of children have at least one parent who works full time and year-round.

According to the Economic Policy Institute, poor adults spend more hours working each week than their wealthier counterparts.

Myth: A huge chunk of my tax dollars supports welfare recipients.

Reality: Welfare costs about 1 percent of the federal budget. The majority of those living in poverty do not receive government welfare assistance.

Myth: Those who get on welfare stay on welfare.

Reality: Of the poor who receive welfare assistance, more than half stop receiving benefits after a year, 70 percent within two years, and 85 percent within four years.

Myth: Just work harder.

Reality: This is not our grandfathers' era where people could simply "pull themselves up by their bootstraps," assuming that was ever really true.

Our current economy requires workers to be more skilled than in the past. Meanwhile, jobs for unskilled workers simply don't pay enough. The minimum wage 50 years ago was worth $15.29 in 2014 dollars. Today, an education provides the bootstraps people need for social mobility. However, many people who live in poverty cannot afford the costs associated with secondary education.

Myth: Poor people have babies to get more welfare.

Reality: The average welfare family is no larger than the average non-recipient American family. Welfare benefits are not a significant incentive for childbearing.

Myth: Poverty is a minority issue.

Reality: Poverty affects people of all races. Of the Americans living in poverty today, 42 percent are White, 29 percent are Hispanic or Latino, 25 percent are Black or African American, and 4 percent are Asian. However, poverty has a disparate impact on people of color.

Myth: Poor people tend to abuse drugs and alcohol.

Reality: Poor people are no more likely than their wealthier counterparts to abuse alcohol or drugs. Although drug sales are more visible in poor neighborhoods, drug use is equally distributed across poor, middle class, and wealthy communities. Studies have found that alcohol consumption is significantly higher among upper middle class white high school students than among poor black high school students. This finding supports a history of research showing that alcohol abuse is far more prevalent among wealthy people than among poor people.

How You Can Help

Each of us has the power to help fight poverty, and the myths and stereotypes about poverty in the U.S.

• Speak up when someone is blaming the poor or stereotyping the poor as needy, ill, deficient or not to be trusted.

•Speak out to local elected officials at all levels of government about poverty issues, like raising the minimum wage and making quality education, preschool, child care, housing, health insurance, and public transportation affordable and accessible for all.

•Vote. We have the means to end poverty. We must elect officials who have the will.

 Donate to organizations that help the poor. In Rock County that would include the Food Shelf and the Crisis Center,

Ohme served youth as official for more than four decades

I've shared many conversations with Jere Ohme over the years, but one now stands out in my mind.

Ohme passed away at the age of 71 on May 3, and my thoughts instantly bounced back to a brief give-and-take we shared during an Adrian High School football game more than a decade ago.

The conversation took place about one week after I penned a column about a 13-year-old cat that I had to put down, and it gave me an instant belief that Ohme was a kind and perceptive man.

"Sorry to read about your cat," he said, during a timeout in the AHS game he was officiating. "I bet you've already received a lot of sympathy cards for that column you wrote." As strange as that may sound, Ohme was absolutely correct. I did receive some correspondence through the mail as a result of said column, including some from people I didn't even know, and it led me to believe Ohme possessed a great insight into human nature. One doesn't learn those things on the sideline at a football game very often, but I have to believe the gridiron is where Ohme was most comfortable. As an official for 43 years, it's clear to me Jere cared about kids and wanted to do his part to make sure the games they played were staged within the rules.

Luverne's Cary Radisewitz will back up that statement.

"He loved it," Radisewitz responded, when asked why Ohme served as an official for more than four decades.

"He always looked forward to working football games on Fridays and Saturdays, and he was good at it. He was what I call a quiet observer. Like all officials, he didn't want to be noticed. But he knew rules very well, he enforced them, he stayed in shape and always played the part of a referee well."

Radisewitz should know because he worked with Ohme as a football official from 1992 until Ohme hung up his whistle four years ago.

Ohme's officiating career included working basketball games with Curt Laudon Jr. and baseball games early on, but Radisewitz knew him best as a football official.

"I was a football coach at Huron College (South

FROM THE SIDELINES

Dakota) in 1991 and he showed up to work one of our games," he recalled. "I moved to Luverne in 1992 and guess who I ran into on the street one day? It was Jere Ohme. We ended up refereeing high school and college football games until he called it quits. We worked state championship games, arena football games and college games in the regular season and the playoffs. There are a lot of guys who officiate football games, but Jere made it fun. He was our leader and I think he is one of the pioneers of the profession." One thing I know for sure is Ohme wasn't an official for game checks. He was an administrator of the rules during a lot of high profile, meaningful contests, but he wasn't above helping out kids playing football at all levels of the sport. "Jere was always working the junior varsity and freshman games in Luverne, and I know the kids and opposing coaches appreciated that," Radisewitz said. Radisewitz appreciated the fact that he got the chance to work on a crew with Ohme for what was going to be his last high school game.

It was a section championship game in Marshall, and his crewmate said Ohme was spot on with his calls the entire night. As fate would have it, Radisewitz didn't get the chance to work with Ohme during his final game. That would come a year later.

"I got a call from Murray County Central saying they needed an official for their homecoming game," he recalled.

"We were booked for that weekend, but I told them that I know the best official in southwest Minnesota was open that night. I also said I didn't know if they could talk Jere into it because he didn't have his license any more and sold his officiating gear."

Once the MCC athletic director found out which official Radisewitz was referring to, they got him cleared by the state officials to work the game and set him up with a uniform to do so.

As it turns out, the last game Ohme officiated may have been the most special one because he was a 1964 graduate of Slayton High School.

Luverne's reign in true team competition ends

By John Rittenhouse

The Luverne track teams were unable to advance to state competition during the Section 2AA True Team Track and Field Championships in Mankato Thursday.

Competing in the section for the first time after ruling Section 3A competition for years, the Cardinal teams were unable to extend their past True Team success.

The LHS girls, who had won 11 consecutive 3A titles, scored 492.5 points to place sixth in a 12-team field led by Fairmont (592 points).

The Cardinal boys, who had won five of the last six 3A crowns, placed 10th out of 12 teams with 294 points in a field paced by Jordan (592.5 points).

A new wrinkle to the True Team format this year is having six wild card teams advance to the state meet, but a squad had to place between second and fifth place at the section level to be considered.

LHS didn't meet those expectations.

The Luverne girls did produce three section titles and placed second in two events in Mankato.

LHS took top honors in the 800-, 1,600- and 3,200-meter relays with respective 1:49.34, 4:14.92 and 10:05.34 efforts.

Along with forming the winning 800-meter relay, Sierra Schmuck, Sydney Biever, Gracie Zewiske and Ivy Hudson placed second in the 400-meter relay with a time of 52.07.

Regan Feit, Autumn Nath, Tiana Lais and Brooklynn Ver Steeg teamed up in the 1,600-meter relay, while Jadyn Anderson, Gabrielle Ferrell, Lais and Tenley Nelson formed the 3,200-meter squad.

Mallory Thorson turned in the top individual effort for the Cardinals by placing second in the triple jump with a distance of 33-6 ½.

The Adrian baseball team broke even when it played a Red Rock Conference doubleheader against Red Rock Central-Westbrook-Walnut Grove in Lamberton Thursday.

The Falcons came out on the winning end of a 2-0 decision in the opener, but the Dragons prevailed 3-2 in the finale to sport a 4-2 league record at day's end.

A strong pitching effort by Adrian's Skylar Polzine went unrewarded in Game 1.

Spring cleaning for the soul

The last few weeks I have started a spiritual practice I like to call "God in the Neighborhood."

When I get the chance, I like to take 10-15 minutes simply walking around Luverne asking the question, "What is God up to here?"

I couldn't help but enjoy watching the transition from "Junk Days" to our "City Wide Rummage Sale." Certainly there is significant theological insight to be gained from these happenings.

What a feeling it can be for us to let go of things we have kept well beyond their expiration date. Some of the items we truly invested in we have felt responsible for, and we even feel guilty parting with them.

Perhaps you realized that in the decision to let go, you found out what a gift it can be to release items that have worn us down and perhaps clouded our living spaces. There is certainly a spiritual takeaway in spring-cleaning in letting go.

As Christians we practice confession and forgiveness. We are able to tell the truth about ourselves (including the parts that aren't so pretty) and remarkably our actions do not preclude us from God's love for us.

God, in his forgiveness,

BUILT ON A ROCK

By Pastor Stephen Hilding, Grace Lutheran Church, Luverne

cleanses, forgives and renews us in Holy Baptism. God brings something new out of something old.

The miracle of the Gospel is that God takes the things we are willing to part with, to offer up, to trade in, to get rid of, and we receive a new start! God takes these items our sinfulness, our pride, our selfishness, our anger — and works them together to create something entirely new.

God shapes us, molds us, convicts us and sets us free to live as new creations. We are given the chance to release the baggage that weighs us down, that burdens our hearts and fills us with regret and remorse. We have a God who brings life out of death, who brings something new out of something old.

May you find permission to let go and be made new in Christ's love and forgiveness this spring season.

Poverty simulation/continued from page 1B _

money with other family members and would often be overwhelmed with desperation.

As the simulation played out, the heads of households became visibly frustrated in their goal to keep their household afloat.

George Bonnema played the role of a community college student caring for his siblings while his father was in jail. He admitted that he left a runaway sibling in a jail, where at least the child would be fed. "Plus, I don't have transportation to go get him," said an exasperated Bonnema.

In another family, Julie Haugom was a 9-year-old asthmatic child with learning disabilities who was left at home to care for her 1-year-old niece while her 20-year-old sister (who lived in the home) was at work and school.

Their 40-year-old single father (Luverne High School student Michelle Kramer) works full time for $10.75 per hour and struggles with child care, schedules and finances.

Midway through the simulation, this stressedout father learned his child needs eyeglasses for $50 and is notified he must meet with his caseworker for an annual review or risk losing human services benefits. These appointments are during business hours, which meant he would have to take time off from work and find transportation to get to them.

At the end of the simulation, most of the families were in worse shape than they were when they began, and those who maintained or (in the case of a few) got ahead, admitted they did so with a little extra help or act of kindness.

One family that owned a car but lost a home moved in with a neighbor who didn't have a car. In that way, the families also helped each other with child care in addition to housing and transportation.

— Debi Brandt, facilitator

When it was over, Brandt asked the families to describe in a word how they were feeling after being part of the exercise. Those words included "frustrated," "stressed," "anxious," "hopeless," "embarrassed" "angry"

Mary Lou Mulligan had played the role of a child whose family couldn't afford the fees needed for a class trip. The school offered a scholarship, but she had to accept it in front of her peers. She expressed embarrassment over that.

Children in other families simply opted not to go on the field trip to avoid the embarrassment.

One family's car had been stolen, but because they couldn't speak English, they didn't community well with police who ended up doing nothing. Meanwhile, the family was still expected to make the auto loan payment when it was due.

And many complained about long lines at understaffed service offices, which sometimes closed while people were still waiting in

This, Brandt said, is what the simulation was all about.

"How many opportunities do we have like that to be a ray of sunshine in someone's life?" she said. "What can we do in Luverne, Minnesota, to make a difference in the community?"

That question prompted small solutions from volunteers in the room: check on an elderly neighbor, stop at school to pay a delinquent lunch account or activity fee, offer to drive someone to an appointment.

Brandt later told the Star Herald that she was impressed by the number of volunteers and participants in Monday's simulation and by the sincere reactions afterward.

"Hopefully it will lead someone to action," Brandt

'Poor people are lazy' and other myths make life more difficult for those living in poverty

People living in poverty have to make tough choices with their money all day, every day, with no room for error but plenty of judgment from others.

Many people who do not live in poverty have a tendency to criticize the poor and blame them for their laziness, lack of intelligence and bad decisions. They believe the poor must have done something to deserve

This belief helps fuel the many myths and stereotypes that negatively impact those living in poverty in the U.S. Here are just a few of them:

Myth: Poor people are unmotivated and have weak work ethics.

Reality: Although poor people are often stereotyped as lazy, two-thirds of people living in poverty work an average of 1.7 jobs; 83 percent of children from low-income families have at least one employed parent; and close to 60 percent of children have at least one parent who works full time and year-round.

According to the Economic Policy Institute, poor adults spend more hours working each week than their wealthier counterparts.

Myth: A huge chunk of my tax dollars supports welfare recipients.

Reality: Welfare costs about 1 percent of the federal budget. The majority of those living in poverty do not receive government welfare assistance.

Myth: Those who get on welfare stay on welfare.

Reality: Of the poor who receive welfare assistance, more than half stop receiving benefits after a year, 70 percent within two years, and 85 percent within four years.

Myth: Just work harder.

Reality: This is not our grandfathers' era where people could simply "pull themselves up by their bootstraps," assuming that was ever really true.

Our current economy requires workers to be more skilled than in the past. Meanwhile, jobs for unskilled workers simply don't pay enough. The minimum wage 50 years ago was worth $15.29 in 2014 dollars. Today, an education provides the bootstraps people need for social mobility. However, many people who live in poverty cannot afford the costs associated with secondary education.

Myth: Poor people have babies to get more welfare.

Reality: The average welfare family is no larger than the average non-recipient American family. Welfare benefits are not a significant incentive for childbearing.

Myth: Poverty is a minority issue.

Reality: Poverty affects people of all races. Of the Americans living in poverty today, 42 percent are White, 29 percent are Hispanic or Latino, 25 percent are Black or African American, and 4 percent are Asian. However, poverty has a disparate impact on people of color.

Myth: Poor people tend to abuse drugs and alcohol.

Reality: Poor people are no more likely than their wealthier counterparts to abuse alcohol or drugs. Although drug sales are more visible in poor neighborhoods, drug use is equally distributed across poor, middle class, and wealthy communities. Studies have found that alcohol consumption is significantly higher among upper middle class white high school students than among poor black high school students. This finding supports a history of research showing that alcohol abuse is far more prevalent among wealthy people than among poor people.

How You Can Help

Each of us has the power to help fight poverty, and the myths and stereotypes about poverty in the U.S.

• Speak up when someone is blaming the poor or stereotyping the poor as needy, ill, deficient or not to be trusted.

•Speak out to local elected officials at all levels of government about poverty issues, like raising the minimum wage and making quality education, preschool, child care, housing, health insurance, and public transportation affordable and accessible for all.

•Vote. We have the means to end poverty. We must elect officials who have the will.

 Donate to organizations that help the poor. In Rock County that would include the Food Shelf and the Crisis Center,
