More than $22 million in improvements proposed for Luverne schools

By Mavis Fodness

Luverne School Board members received a dollar amount Thursday night, May 11, of $22.8 million for improving and expanding the current elementary and middle/ high school buildings.

The district has been working with long-range facility planners Foster, Jacobs & Johnson of Sioux Falls.

FJJ's Mike Hubbard presented the estimated budget information and returned Wednesday to work on prioritizing projects and determining how to pay for them.

 $For the \, past \, several \, months, the \,$ FJJ consultants gathered recommendations from district administration, teachers and the public and have combined them with state recommendations.

The recommended building improvement measures were ranked according to deficiencies.

At Thursday's meting, Hubbard outlined the general learning space and infrastructure deficiencies in both buildings.

"When we get to the design development (stage) then you will approve the specifics," he said.

No exterior improvements were recommended under FJJ's proposal. "The buildings are in great shape," Hubbard said.

Most improvements occur at the middle/high school

"We create what we call a learning commons," he said. "Consider this the front porch to the classrooms.

Two two-story additions would be built in the north and south wings of the original 1956 high school, expanding the school's footprint to the west.

Under the learning commons proposal, the current hallways would no longer extend down the entire north and south wings. Portions at the ends of the hallways would be expanded into common learning areas.

Students could gather in these areas for small group discussions

The adage, "There's something about the outside of a horse that is good for the inside of a man," was evident last week during one of Marie LaRock's horsemanship sessions.

Ten-year-old Grace Anderson from Beaver Creek was all smiles as she rode Molly, a placid quarter horse mare. through a series of obstacles.

"She just loves horses," said her mother, Katie, as she watched from just outside the fence. "I am asked every day if she can get a horse."

As a compromise, Grace gets a full horse experience from LaRock who recently opened Rock Ranch near Hills.

LaRock, a speech and language pathologist and horse enthusiast, is opening her acreage and horses to elementary through high school students for an "Introduction to Horsemanship" class offered through Luverne Community Education.

Council supports spending up to $35,000 for Luverne's upcoming 150th celebration

By Lori Sorenson

The Luverne City Council agreed to compensate the Luverne Area Chamber up to $35,000 to support this year's events and activities for the town's 150th anniversary celebration.

The celebration schedule from May to December includes more than 900 events and observances with the majority of them happening July 14-16.

"We have a great committee that keeps coming up with creative ideas," Chamber Director Jane Wildung Lanphere told council members at the May 9 meeting.

She said the estimated cost of the new and special events is $45,000, and the celebration committee intends to fundraise at least $25,000 in order to keep the 150th celebration events free to the public.

The council unanimously agreed to fund the celebration. Mayor Pat Baustian said, "We can do this once every 150 years."

Councilwoman Caroline Thorson praised the Chamber and the committee for planning the celebration. "You can start to feel the excitement building," she said. Lanphere said that inquiries and reservations are increasing. "For the canoe trip, we have 175 applications sent out," she said. "We'll see how many come back, but there's definitely interest."

Councilman Dan Nath also praised Lanphere and the celebrations committee for their plans to include a wide range of participants.

"Everyone feels included," he said. "That's fantastic. There's something for all ages."

The full schedule of events for Luverne's 150th celebration can be viewed on the Chamber's website, luvernechamber.com.

Luverne City Council considers possible land purchase at The Lake

By Lori Sorenson

Luverne City Council members met in closed session Tuesday night, May 9, to discuss negotiations for a pending land purchase at The Lake on the west end of Edgehill Street.

Mike and Traci Davis announced in March that they're asking $80,000 for three tracts totaling nearly four acres at the east end of The Lake, including a small part of the beach.

The city owns the actual body of water along with the parking lot, road, fishing pier and other areas that have received public invest-

Davis told the Star Herald in March that his property is for sale because his goals for the area "do not have enough support to go forward in the amount of time that is suitable for me."

Specifically, he wants to develop a campground near The Lake and he said the public process is moving

"I've been waiting two years for this, and the patience is gone," Davis said, when asked why the campground development was so urgent.

He also alluded to his personal investments in his property.

"I've done this out of the goodness of my heart, and I've gotta start making some money," he said.

The Luverne City Council has been clear about its intent to assist with campground development, but it is not interested in owning and operating a public campground.

While The Lake area has been considered for this purpose, City Administrator John Call said there's more involved than preparing lots for campers.

'That ground is predominantly flood plain, and it would have to be approved by not only city code but by the DNR and public health officials," Call said in March.

The city has first right of refusal on the Davis land that's for sale. Tuesday's meeting last week was part of the negotiations process.

Spring corn planting nearly complete for 2017 crop season

Western Rock County farmer Matt Sorenson plants soybeans in a field along Highway 23 Saturday, May 13. He's among hundreds of area crop producers who took advantage of a long string of mild weather last week to finish spring planting. According to this week's state crop progress report, local farmers had 6.3 days of suitable conditions in the past week, jumping planting progress up from 35 percent earlier in the month to 84 percent complete. Twenty percent of the newly planted corn has emerged across the state. Soybeans were 47 percent planted, six days behind last year but within the five-year average of 40 percent complete.

City OKs construction on hog confinement within two miles of Luverne

By Lori Sorenson

Dave and Lisa Hamann are constructing a 2,400-hog confinement building 11/2 miles southeast of Luverne.

They're acquiring adjacent land from Melvin and Phydelis Hamann for construction, and they're subdividing a piece of property in order to correct a surveying error on the original tract.

Because the activity falls within Luverne's 2-mile buffer zone, it requires city approval, which was granted at the May 9 council meeting.

There are no developmental issues with Hamann's plans, but Mayor Pat Baustian expressed concern that permission was requested after construction had already begun.

'Sometimes these things can be contentious, especially being a confinement building in the buffer zone," he said.

"To have this come to the council after construction starts could be a little dangerous ... There would be a chance that the council would someday vote no, and then what do they do?"

Luverne Attorney Paul Vis attended the meeting to answer questions on behalf of the Hamanns.

"It's a case where they got ahead of themselves before consulting," Vis said about the

It's due for a cleaning, safety check, interior and exterior painting, exterior balcony replacement, new lighting and an updated (and illuminated) city of Luverne logo for a total cost of $434,000.

"It's going to be really nice," City Administrator John Call said at a recent council meeting. "People driving down Highway 75 can see the water tower and Luverne logo displayed."

Neighbors within 300 feet of the water tower received personal invitations to attend a meeting Tuesday night in city hall to learn how the project will affect them.

For example, the work will take no longer than 75 days and phone numbers were shared for residents to call with questions and concerns.

Utility Service Co. from Perry, Georgia, was awarded the bid for the project, which will utilize a "shroud and bonnet" to contain blasting debris and paint drift.

It cost $92,000 extra for the precaution, but Call said it's a worthwhile investment to protect nearby property. "I think our residents will appreciate that we spent the extra money,"

During their initial budget discussion about the water tower, City Council members recalled the 1989 tower painting project that was done without the protection of encap sulation

Call said the contractor has a good reputation, based on similar projects completed in Sibley, Orange City, Sheldon and Rock Rapids, Iowa. "They do have a good share of experience in the area," Call said. "I have a lot of confidence they will do a good job with this project." The new high performance coating inside and outside the tank has a service life of roughly 30 years.

The tank has been drained and will be out of service for roughly two months, and during that time city water will run on pressure through plants and ground storage.

or group projects immediately outside the classrooms.

"It's still a circulation space but it's not just for getting from A to B," FJJ's Hubbard explained.

A single floor addition is recommended on the school's southeast side to establish a more distinct "front door" to the school.

The expansion would improve building security and relocate the cafeteria from the basement to the main level.

When not in use for food service, the area would become a commons, proving a gathering space before and after the events in the high school gymnasium.

The auditorium would be upgraded under FJJ's recommendation.

"You have a great performance space when compared to other districts. It has been well taken care of," Hubbard said.

Auditorium improvements include leveling the floor to Americans with Disabilities Act compliance and updating the seating.

The district office would also move to the front of the middle/high school under the proposed recommendations.

"We're suggesting making the front door be more visible and be what feels like a front door," Hubbard said.

Other improved areas in the high school include the biology, chemistry and physics areas along with upgrading the band and choral departments.

Limited improvements at elementary school

A two-classroom addition was recommended for the elementary school, expanding the northwest wing, where natural light would be easily accessed, architect Miller said.

The added rooms allow the interior work room and special education areas to expand in the former classroom areas.

Up to 30 additional electrical outlets are recommended for the 1999 structure, which was designed in an era that didn't have a need to recharge the variety of electronics now used regularly in the classroom.

Public meetings scheduled for June about project

Over the next three weeks, board members will meet with architects and financial advisers to prioritize the recommended 39 building improvement measures for the middle/high school and 11 for the elementary school.

The board will meet in special session on May 17, 23 and 30. The meetings begin at 7 p.m.

Hubbard said each improvementwouldbeexamined and matched to one or more of the eight potential funding sources available to school districts, including a bond referendum.

Luverne's current longrange facility improvement referendum will be paid in full by the end of this year. The district could renew the $12.5 million levy at the same or a lesser amount.

Public feedback sessions are planned for the first and third weeks in June.

What does it mean? God makes promises; it's up to us to discover the pots of gold

A Yosemite National Park visitor in 2010 recorded his reaction to a double rainbow in a goofy You-Tube video that went viral.

'Whoa, man! ... It's a double rainbow ... all the way ... That's intense," he says while panning the horizon in the jerky cell phone recording. "Whoah-oh-oh!... What does it mean? What does it mean?

Good question. What does it mean? For Noah and the animal pairs in the Biblical ark, the rainbow was a promise there would never again be a global flood.

For most of us today, rainbows are beautiful natural phenomena that occur when sunshine breaks through dark clouds after a rain.

Rainbows make us smile. But sometimes they make us

A rainbow appeared in the eastern horizon Wednesday, May 3, just as Mom and I arrived home from a brain surgery consult in Omaha.

It had been a long day of complicated medical information and pressing decisions about our strategy to attack the returned tumor in Mom's head.

Glioblastoma melanoma the dreaded "GBM" — is aggressive, resistant to treatment and if you're lucky to beat it the first time — it's guaranteed to come

We pursued a referral to an Omaha brain surgeon who is widely recognized for removing the most cancer with the least brain damage.

But that offered little comfort when she informed us of the surgical risks: impaired vision and ability to communicate.

When our jaws dropped, she quickly clarified these were worst-case scenarios, but all we On second THOUGHT heard was "partial blindness" and "impaired communication."

By Lori Sorenson, editor

So, what were our options? We scheduled surgery and left Omaha feeling a bit defeated. No matter what we do, the cancer will come back.

Mom said she's not afraid of dying, and I believe her. I don't know anyone more excited about heaven than she is.

What she fears is the possibility that her body will linger in good health long after her mind is gone. I don't blame her. Who wants that?

But we don't get to choose

We do get to choose how we live, and it seems Mom has that part figured out.

When the double rainbow appeared against the deep blue sky, tears welled in our eyes. "Oh look, Lori," she said. "It's a promise."

We've been blessed with many pots of gold amid life's rainbows; but the truly blessed are those who recognize their gifts and live gratefully.

I drove that final mile pondering the meaning of the rainbow, of our purpose in life and other things I'm not qualified to contemplate.

Then, a few days later Mom shared an email with her daughters. "Do not be anxious about anything," she wrote quoting Philippians 4:6-7.

"But in every situation, by prayer and petition, with thanksgiving, present your requests to God. And the p of God, which transcends all understanding, will guard your hearts and your minds in Christ Jesus."

How we deliver education now is different than in 1956'

Be open to hearing the proposed improvements to Luverne Public Schools

Luverne's seven school board members have important decisions to make in the next couple of weeks.

Katie Baustian, Reva Sehr, Eric Hartman, Colleen Deutsch, Tim Jarchow, Shelley Sandbulte and Jodi Bosch have already begun weighing the pros and cons of how to improve our school facilities to benefit students for decades to come.

Last week the school design consulting firm of Foster, Jacobs & Johnson outlined 50 possible building improvement measures for district officials. Some of those measures may not be practical improvements such as demolishing and rebuilding portions of the 1956 high school. But a dollar amount has been assessed for that measure. Other improvements are more practical and involve smaller additions plus remodeling and upgrading what is already there.

"Howwedelivereducationnowis different than in 1956," FJJ's Mike Hubbard told board members last week.

It is our responsibility as residents and taxpayers to become involved in the project.

We need to read the materials provided on the school's website at www.isd2184.edu, attend the upcoming public meetings that will reveal the board's priorities, and understand the courses of action needed to pay for those improvements.

Be constructive and responsive in giving board members feedback on the options as they work through the process. The board is faced with the task of prioritizing a list of proposed improvements totaling $22.8 million for the elementary, middle and high schools.

Fortunately there are no emergency improvements such as fixing leaky roofs or drafty windows. Hubbard commended current and past school officials for taking good care of our aging buildings so that no improvements are necessary to the schools' exteriors that are not already planned.

The consulting firm indicated there are seven possible funding sources for the proposed improvements, and school finance experts will be directing our school officials through the various options.

There are the school's budgets for capital improvements, health and safety, and safe schools.

With upgrades in lighting and heating, there are potential energy-saving programs that offer refunds for installing energy-efficient lighting and heating equipment.

Next are potential funding sources by lease levy, abatement bonds and along-term facility maintenance levy, which taxpayers could vote on in the November general election.

Twenty years ago school district residents voted on a $12.5 million levy that built the current elementary school. It was a good investment and has since seen thousands of students receive a solid start to learning. That debt will be paid in full after this year.

Now is the time to invest in improving the middle and high schools.

While many of us walked the long hallways of LHS and received a high school diploma in the existing facilities, today's education can be made better by creating areas that develop small group interaction skills and other learning tools necessary in the 21st century workforce.

School officials plan to make their long-term facility plans known in June. Eight days are set aside to gather public feedback.

It's important for you to attend, ask questions and give feedback on the proposals even if you no longer have children attending school.

Our school leaders need your input as they make decisions that will affect how Luverne Schools educate students in the future.

Mulligan: Support American Legion Auxiliary by purchasing flowers during Poppy Month

Voice of our readers

To the Editor:

The governor of Minnesota signed a declaration stating May to be the official Poppy Month.

Many flowers are in bloom, including the American Legion Auxiliary poppy flower. The American Legion Auxiliary units all over the state of Minnesota will be out with poppy posters with the red flower and on Poppy Day we will be asking you to donate to the red flower and to wear it proudly.

Since World War I the Unites States has been involved in six wars. We're currently in our longest war, the War on Terror, now in its 16th year, with 22 million veterans and 1.5 million United States Military personnel.

The United States has been at war somewhere within and beyond our borders for over 90 percent of our country's 241 years of existence.

The American Legion Auxiliary is needed today more than ever. That is why the American Legion Auxiliary goes to all the businesses to ask for donations for the poppy posters and for the businesses to hang the posters in the window so people can see them.

The Auxiliary's mission is in the spirit of service, not self. The mission of the American Legion Auxiliary is to support the American Legion and honor the sacrifices of those who serve by enhancing the lives of veterans, military and their families, both at home and abroad.

This is the list where we donate the money that we receive from the poppy posters and the poppy flower donations:

country and its beautiful, bustling, enterprising county seat.

The benefits which the consummation of this great enterprise will secure to our county have already been enumerated at length in these columns, and it is needless to now renew the recital to impress our people with a due appreciation of the importance of the results just accomplished, in their relation to the future developments of Luverne and Rock county.

Direct communications with the best markets for our produce and convenient connections with leading through lines of railroad — the one thing needful which the necessities of this section have long demanded - have at last been secured by way of one of the best lines of railroad in the country, and now every material disadvantage by which the development of our country has been retarded, has been completely and effectually removed. Our people certainly have great reason to rejoice, and there should be to them no slight degree of satisfaction in the reflection that the great benefits which our town and county are now about to realize are due in a large measure to their own enterprise, liberality and public spirit. Naturally the one absorbing subject of interest during the past few days has been the work of the track layers. But for delay in obtaining ties, the iron would have been laid to the Omaha crossing Saturday

As it was, the track was only completed to the wagon-road crossing east of Mr. Jaycox' residence. Sunday some work was done on the bridge over the Rock, but no iron was laid.

Monday the track was laid to the new depot grounds and the first train on the new road pulled into Luverne across the foot of Main street.

The new road is one of the best in respect to the excellence of its construction ever built in the west.

As the HERALD has previously stated, the road was built with the purpose in view of making it a great through route from Chicago to the Northern Pacific, and special care has been taken at every stage of the work of construction to make the road first class in every respect.

All sharp curves and high grades have been avoided, the road bed is made high enough to escape trouble from snow blockades, and the track is laid with steel rails which considerably exceed in size those in ordinary use.

The work of laying the track is an interesting sight. About 150 men and 20 teams are employed.

The supply train loaded with ties, rails, spikes, etc., follows close upon the "iron gang," and the rails are hauled from the car to the end of the track on a truck drawn by two mules.

The "iron gang" is followed by the "spikers," and these in turn by the "liners" who straighten the track. The surface men bring up the rear and level the track in readiness for use as fast as the iron is laid. The "trams" which the company used at first in laying the iron have been discarded.

At this writing the track is laid to a distance of about a mile and a half north of town. The telegraph poles have been set as far as Luverne and the wire will be strung to this place in a day or two.

One of the side tracks at the depot is beinglaid this afternoon, and it is understood that work on the depot will begin at once. The track is now laid about 20 miles north of Pipestone and by the time the iron is laid to that place from the south the road will probably be nearly completed

Time for trimming of new growth on mugho pines

Tent worms spotted on flowering crabs; just remove web, cut branches

We made a quick trip to Detroit last weekend ... well, if 14 hours driving time going and 14 hours coming home could be considered quick ... and we had two days to spend there with our son ... that was the weekend.

In the midst of that, we got to shop six of the biggest garden centers in the greater Detroit area, and that was a blast! The weather was absolutely perfect and this was their first good weekend for being outdoors. So you'd better believe the people were making the most of it. One huge greenhouse range in particular was like a Wal-Mart on steroids! I did find some treasures so the chase was worth it for me.

This is the time to be pruning the new growth called candles on our mugho pines. Cut that burst of new growth back by one half to three fourths, depending on how much you need to control their size. By doing that now, the cut back tip will not be visible and they will have plenty of time to develop next year's growth buds.

Now is also the best time to shear pyramidal evergreens. Again, the sheared edges will soon be covered by new growth. Often people wait until these evergreens get too big to start this shearing process; then making them smaller is pretty difficult. I recommend doing this annually to keep them in great shape indefinitely.

I have noticed a few tent caterpillars showing up on flowering crab trees as well as apple trees. The tent part is the visible protective home for a mass of worms that live inside the web and feed on the leaves. As the worms grow, so does the web until they venture out to get access to enough leaves to keep every worm happy.

Their feeding doesn't really damage the tree unless it is a small tree and they eat most of the leaves, in which case, they have removed its ability to manufacture food for itself.

If I can reach the web, I just pullitoff the branch, dump it on the ground and have a victory dance on it ... that pretty much finishes off that mass of worms.

If you're not inclined to achieve that level of satisfaction, you can snip off the branch and dispose it. If you can't reach it, you can use an insecticide spray, but often the web will protect the worms from the chemical unless they are large enough to have left the web to feed. They feed during the warm part of the day and retreat to the safety of the web at night, so keep that in mindwhenyoutimeyourspray application. Ignoring them will result in another crop of moths that will lay a mass of eggs just like the one you are looking at now...It's called multiplication!

Each activity is done in the safest manner possible, LaRock said.

Luverne Community Education director Karen Willers said LaRock's class is the first equine offering since she took over the program in 1999.

"It's the first time ever," Willers wrote in an email. "Marie and Dan LaRock called us and asked if we would consider working together on a venture like this — which is the best way for community education activities to develop."

More often, Willers said her committee would have an idea or suggestion for a class and the hunt for an instructor would ensue.

Rock Ranch is already a 501c(3) non-profit organization. They already have liability insurance in place and have the necessary liability waiver and health information paperwork in place for participants, Willers said.

The forms are available on the ranch's website at www.riderockranch.org.

Offering the public an outlet to interact with horses is just getting off the ground for the LaRocks.

They had previously offered friends and fellow church members the opportunity to learn more about horses and to ride. For some participants, the visits were their first experience with Horses can improve a person in four key areas: physically, cognitively, socially and psychologically.

LaRock has seen firsthand how riding and working with a horse can help specific problems through her involvement with Horse-Power, a therapeutic and hippotherapy program near Sioux Falls.

Providing education and recreation with horses locally is also a first for LaRock.

"I thought it would be a good place to start introducing the public to Rock Ranch," she said.

Ironically her own experience with horses began at the same rural Hills acreage where she lives with her family and where the lessons take place.

"My grandfather was a huge horseman," LaRock said about her mother's father, Harold Sather.

"He helped me get my first pony."

LaRock is the daughter of Marilyn Nelson, Hills, and the late Duane Nelson.

The Hills-Beaver Creek High School graduate said she has fond memories of traveling the few short miles regularly to her grandparents' home — now her own $acreage-to\ care\ for\ her$ pony and to ride.

LaRock wants those who come to the ranch to leave with the same memories.

"It's just a great experience and we have the facilities," she said.

Safety is the No. 1 emphasis at the LaRock Ranch when working with the animals.

The safety starts with the participants themselves: they need to wear boots or closed-toed shoes. "Safety is huge," LaRock said. "Lots of things can happen."

A minimum of three participants is necessary for one of six class times to be offered. Maximum is five students.

landowner and contractors.

The county approved the project on March 7, but Baustian suggested scheduling should improve among land management and county officials.

The County Board approved expansion of Hamann's existing feedlot in Luverne Township from 282.5 animal units to 750, according to a story published March 16 in the Rock County Star Herald.

That conditional use permit was needed because the expansion was more than 250 animal units and was within a quarter of a mile of an existing residence.

Hamann's project eliminates existing confinement buildings and an open feedlot for his current feeder pig operation, placing all pigs in a new 101-by-192-foot confinement barn.

Hamann said he talked with neighbors about his expansion plans and said no one objected.

Harold Stroeh, who lives southwest of the new feedlot and within a quarter of a mile, attended the public hearing Feb. 27.

"Idon'twantitacross from my house," Stroeh said at the hearing. "It's going to stink us out of our house." Hamann said the new confinement would improve his manure management and would lessen the smell. Instead of spreading manure on top of his fields several times a year, he will be able to knife manure into the soil once a year. "I thought I was making a big improvement in eliminating manure running across my yard," Hamann said. Commissioners agreed, but stipulated manure odor be alleviated by trees planted on the barn's west side.

The making of a colonel

Herreid chooses Luverne for Minnesota National Guard promotion ceremony

Story and photos by Mavis Fodness

In half the time it took to read his military and civic accomplishments, Warren G. Herreid II was quick to turn the attention back to the Minnesota National Guard who honored him Saturday.

More than 30 friends, family and guardsmen listened for more than two minutes as Herreid's military and civic contributions were read during a ceremony outside the Herreid Military Museum in Luverne.

During the ceremony, in which he was promoted to brevet colonel, Herreid spent one minute thanking the good friends he made during his military career.

"Being in the Guard has changed my life more than anything else I have done in my life with the exception of today," he said. "I have been very fortunate in my life. I appreciate this honor very much. That's enough words."

One of those good friends, Major General Richard Nash, the state's National Guard adjutant general, conducted the ceremony. "Today I am here to formally recognize and acknowledge what he has meant to the state and to our National Guard, something that should have occurred a long time ago," Nash said. "Warren is truly a great leaders, trainer and mentor, one that people generally want to follow."

Since his retirement from the Guard in 1993, Herreid and his wife, Jeannine Rivet, have spearheaded several projects recognizing and honoring veterans.

One of those was the Rock County Veterans Memorial built in

"It has to be one of the finest veterans memorials this state offers or even in this nation," Nash said.

For two minutes, Nash listed other projects Herreid and Rivet supported including the Herreid Military Museum, Memorial Day dinners, Veterans Day banquets, funding of Honor Flights for local World War II veterans, commissioners room in the courthouse, and various groups throughout the state.

Herreid enlisted as a guardsman in 1967, receiving numerous commendations and promotions during his military career. He retired in 1993 as a lieutenant colonel.

Nash pointed to Herreid's 96-year-old father who attended Saturday's event.

He said the senior Warren Herreid joined the military in 1939, serving in World War II and the Korean War before reorganizing the Luverne National Guard Unit in the 1950s. The senior Herreid retired as a sergeant major in 1980.

"So you can see from this military narrative that the man we honor today did not stray too far from his dad's significant military career," Nash said. "Lt. Col. Herreid has his own military service we honor today and the tremendous contributions he has made to our nation's defense, to our state and the Luverne community."

After the ceremony, Nash talked privately with the elder Herreid and gave him a specially designed adjutant general coin.

In the afternoon there will be a matinee for the children, starting at 4 p. m. Miss Gibson will tell the youngsters about her many thrilling experiences which occurred during the filming of her picture. They will be especially interested to hear stories of how she rides untrained broncos, and about her many daring aeroplane

Everyone has heard and read a good deal about conditions in Hollywood during the past few months. In the evening they will get first hand information about this city, and conditions there, from Miss Gibson, who has lived there during practically all of the years she has been a film star. In her talk she will give intimate glimpses into the daily lives of some of the most noted Hollywood people, telling of their homes, their work, and their amusements after the working day is over.

Miss Gibson will also give advance information about what new pictures are now being made and when they will be ready to be shown to the public. Anyone desiring to do so will also have the opportunity of asking Miss Gibson any questions they want by calling the manager of the Palace theatre and making an appointment.

In her new picture, "The Wolverine," Miss Gibson is supported by Leo Maloney and Jack Conolly. In this feature, the star performs some of her most difficult and remarkable stunts in horseback riding. Along side of the rough western strain, a

"The Wolverine" presents a new and interesting type of western photo-drama. It is built in the land of the snow and boasts of God's own settings as a background.

Although action is the byword of this production, the story is true to life and through it runs a current of fiction that grips the young and fascinates the old. To those who love the great outdoors with its splendor of love and thrills, "The Wolverine" is credited with having an especial appeal.

The All-Star Series includes eight teams, and DeBeer will play first base for one of two squads consisting of Class AA players.

They will be honored at a banquet and play at least one game (against the other Class AA team) at Caswell Park on the second Sunday of June.

One of DeBeer's teammates is Jackson County Central catcher Jayni Anderson, an athlete the Cardinal has played with before as members of other teams.

They will be playing against some familiar foes in Pipestone's Rachel Skyberg and Taylor Nesvold, who will be members of the other Class AA team.

"I kind of know some of these girls. Jayni and I have played on the same teams before, and the girls from Pipestone are familiar rivals," DeBeer said.

"I'm just excited about getting the opportunity to play with a bunch of talented players. It should be a lot of fun." I'm hoping DeBeer enjoys the experience.

God wants honesty, not excuses

"The serpent deceived me..." Genesis 3:13b (ESV) Little Ole sat on the front step petting a dog sitting nearby. As the mailman approached he said, 'Good morning, Little Ole. Does your dog bite?"

"No," answered Little Ole. "My dog never bites at all."

When the mailman walked up the steps, the dog bit him. "Hey, kid, you lied to me. You said your dog doesn't bite."

"Mine does not," replied Little Ole, "but dis is not my dog."

Since the beginning of time, people have been making excuses. Genesis 3 tells us that when God confronted Adam and Eve about their disobedience, Adam responded by saying, "The woman whom You gave to be with me, she gave me fruit of the tree, and I ate." Eve also had someone to blame for her disobedience, saying, "The serpent deceived me and I ate." Neither of them wanted to take responsibility for the situation.

BUILT ON A ROCK

By Martha Fick, Good Samaritan chaplin, retired

With some people it is always someone else's fault — and if we're honest with ourselves, making excuses comes pretty easy to all of us. Two of the things that make Christianity so different from other faiths are repentance and forgiveness. God doesn't want to hear our excuses. He wants us to be honest with ourselves and with Him. "If we confess our sins, He is faithful and just to forgive us our sins and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." 1 John 1:9

God is willing to forgive, but first we have to own up to our own shortcomings and the reality of the situation.

Lord God, help us to see ourselves honestly and lovingly through your eyes. Forgive us and redeem us for Jesus' sake. Amen.

There was also additional discussion regarding permit status and feedlot abandonment with no action taken. Bos presented an update regarding nitrate testing stating that the MN Department of Agriculture (MDA) has developed a new state rule for nitrogen fertilizer use. This will impact nitrogen applications in areas that are vulnerable to groundwater contamination; Rock County is identified as vulnerable to groundwater contamination. A second round of well testing will be conducted on the wells that tested high in nitrates by MDA in partnership with the local SWCD and homeowner participation highly encouraged, regardless if the homeowner utilizes the well water for drinking or not. Initial testing results of Rock County from 2016 resulted in 50-percent of the 171 wells tested were over the nitrate health standard of 10 mg/L. Goals for corrective action are to educate producers of nitrate concentration and to get 80-percent active in best management practices.

Bos presented an update regarding One Watershed One Plan, a collaborative effort for protection and restoration efforts for the Missouri River Watershed which will replace County Comprehensive Water Plans.
