

Nutty for nutcrackers

Luverne launches new identity for Winterfest weekend

By Lori Sorenson

A highlight of this weekend's Winterfest Celebration will be Luverne's first-ever nutcracker scavenger hunt.

There are over 100 participating locations with life-sized nutcrackers all over Luverne, and the challenge for scavenger hunters will be to visit each one to learn their proper names.

For example, Luverne Chamber Director Jane Wildung Lanphere said her office has a nutcracker named "Philo Hawes" in honor of Luverne's founder.

Hawes established a mail stop on the Rock River 150 years ago and named the city after his daughter, Eva Luverne.

Lanphere said they placed their Philo nutcracker at the City Public Works building near the power plant, which was the exact site of Hawes' early dugout.

"Philo" will be among more than 100 other nutcrackers to be designated on a scavenger hunt map for participants to use in their search for nutcracker names.

Entry forms will be available beginning Saturday, Dec. 3, at the Winterfest Craft Show, the Chamber office, or at the History Center, which features a 2,500-piece nutcracker display.

The nutcrackers, some of them rare and valuable, are part of the personal collection Betty Mann donated to the new History Center, which recently opened in the former Ford dealership on Main Street.

Lanphere said Mann's collection inspired the Winterfest nutcracker theme.

"We wanted to celebrate the fact that we have this wonderful nutcracker display at the History Center donated by Betty Mann," she said. "The scavenger hunt is something different and unique for our community, and it's a wonderful opportunity to get people out and about." She said she was pleased so many businesses and individuals supported the nutcracker theme. "And so many have such clever names," Lanphere said.

Minnesota Department of Transportation snowplow driver Mark Holtz, Magnolia, has been training to use the new doublesided "tow plow" on I-90. A tow plow is a 26-foot plow mounted on a trailer pulled by a tandem axle snowplow truck, the combination of which clears two lanes at a time.

Rock County is first in state to use two-way version of MnDOT tow plow; motorists urged to use extra caution behind plows, which take up entire two lanes

Snowplow driver Mark Holtz, Magnolia, won't say he's excited for the next winter storm, but he is looking forward to trying the new "tow plow" that he's been training to operate.

"I'm excited to see how it works," Holtz said Monday afternoon under dark clouds and spittering precipitation.

A tow plow is a 26-foot plow mounted on a trailer pulled by a tandem axle snowplow truck, which means the combined apparatus clears

The Minnesota Department of Transportation has only six in the state, and the newest one housed in Luverne is the first of its kind in Minnesota to have a blade on each side of the towed plow.

That means Holtz will have a choice as to which side he'll deploy his second plow.

"It's all about wind direction," he said. "We want the wind to pull the snow away from us to avoid the snow cloud behind us. That's what we want to get away from as fast as possible." ists crash into snowplows each winter statewide because they get lost in the snow plume kicked up behind the plow blade.

"If we get a northwest wind and we're able to pull all the snow into the median, that's ideal," Holtz said.

The new tow plow in Luverne also has two 1,000-gallon brine tanks to dispense de-icer in the extra lane next to the plow truck.

"It just might be the best thing we've ever had,"

To match the unique names to their properly themed nutcrackers required original artwork at Quality Printing, which created most of the nutcrackers.

First vocational education class offered next school year Success of medical and health careers class could lead to future student choices

By Mavis Fodness

By 2020, state officials predict a shortage of health care and manufacturing workers, and local high school students are poised to fill that need.

Introduction to Medical and Health Careers will begin in the fall of 2017 at the Minnesota West Campus in Luverne.

The vocational technical class is open to students in Luverne, Adrian, Edgerton, Ellsworth, Hills-Beaver Creek and Pipestone school districts. Signup for the class will be early next year.

Talks began two years ago

Educators, businesses, community leaders and legislators collaborated to reinstate more career and technical training classes in high schools.

The first community meetings started in late 2014 and early 2015, facilitated by the Southwest West Central Service Cooperative in Marshall.

Retired businessman and former Rock County sheriff Ed Elbers led the charge.

Elbers and 14 others met Nov. 3 at the Minnesota West Campus in Luverne to announce the single class offering next fall.

"We need this for the kids," he said. Young people with career aspirations develop into better citizens and are less likely to need social or community correction services, Elbers said.

Not all students go on to college

In the last 10 years, area high schools have offered a small selection of vocational education classes. Budget cuts and lack of licensed teaching staff have whittled offerings

Wheelchair users face challenges in snow

By Lori Sorenson

When snow piles up on sidewalks and curbs, it's difficult for able-bodied people to get around, let alone for those in a wheelchair.

For Darwin and Marge Jauert, rural Luverne, this was the case Saturday night, Nov. 19, when they came to town for the play at the Palace Theatre.

They parked in one of the handicap parking spots on Estey Street near the Main Street corner, and Marge, who has MS, proceeded from there in her wheelchair.

Darwin said he struggled to help her navigate the wheels over the snow and ice-covered intersection to get to the theater front doors.

"You don't make much of it unless you deal with it every day," he said. "And we do."

He said he understands the impositions of Mother Nature, but 24 hours after the storm, he hoped for better.

"I wouldn't have thought much of it, had it been Friday night (the day of the storm), this was a whole day later," Darwin said.

Work on track to connect county to high-speed Internet

Some already connected to test system

By Mavis Fodness

Six months after crews began working on the $14 million broadband project in Rock County, 554 miles of fiber-to-the-premise (FTTP) cable is buried and selected customers are testing the new service.

Bill Rolfs, who lives in Rosedell Township, is one of about 40 customers in the Jasper and Beaver Creek areas that has been using the high-speed service for more than a month.

"There have been no issues to report to date," said Rolfs, the network administrator with Pipestone Systems in Pipestone. "I am extremely pleased with the new Alliance service."

Rock County Broadband Alliance received a $5 million grant from the state of Minnesota in early 2015. The Alliance is a wholly owned subsidiary of Alliance Communications Cooperative, based in Garretson, South Dakota.

Alliance, along with Rock County, contributed funds to bring highspeed Internet service to the more than 1,300 residents who could not receive high-speed Internet at their residence or were underserved.

Rolfs lives in one of the underserved areas of Rock County.

He said FTTP's more reliable and direct connection has improved his online video and radio streaming from home.

"With the previous satellite service, heavy rains and snowfall would interfere with the television signal, causing blackouts and service interruptions. The (FTTP) Internet corner and go half a block to get anywhere," Darwin said. "Why can't they leave two spots in the middle of the block?"

He said it would also be helpful if those mid-block parking spaces had curb cutouts for wheelchair ramps.

Heartland Express drivers have also noticed difficulties for wheelchair users.

"We have to go to the corners, or stop in the middle of the street and try to unload between cars," said Darcy Raddle, who drives and dispatches for the Rock County public bus service.

"And then you still have to get over the curb."

Raddle said she recognizestheimportanceofbalancing

"You can't have it wheelchair accessible all the way down the block, because you have to have curbs and you have to have parking for businesses," she said.

City Administrator John Call agreed. "We need the curbs for water flow, and you'd have to have a pretty wide stretch to make it work in the middle of the block," he said.

Complicating the Nov. 18 snow event was what he described as a "perfect storm" for difficult street clearing.

For one thing, accumulations started mid morning after people were at work and their vehicles were parked in the way.

street clearing was the fact that snow was wet and heavy, which created hard-packed buildup where plow blades couldn't reach.

"It was a mess," Call said. "It was really wet and really heavy."

He said it's possible that some downtown sidewalks were shoveled Saturday after the city crews had cleared the street Friday night.

This would mean snow would have been piled in curbs and possibly on intersection ramps without anotherround of city plows coming by to clear it.

In most cases, he said city staff or property owners would have addressed the snowy intersection, but the connection consistently performs well and is very reliable. I have found no times where the services are unavailable or slow," Rolfs said.

"It's a two-way street for the city and property owners to keep snow and ice clear," Call said.

Connections to the rest of Rock County will be completed in stages, according to Alliance officials.

Weather played a part in placing the project 20 days behind schedule during the burying of the fiber-optic cables, but crews made up the lost days.

"The rock alone was a huge obstacle and was to me our major hurdle in the project," Hulcher said.

"The Michels (Corporation) fiber installation crews did a fantastic job with all the rock in the county."

Rural residents have commended Michels and its subcontractors who buried the fiber up to the homes and businesses. "I am extremely pleased with the new Alliance service."

Commissioners have shared many of the compliments at recent meetings and were pleasantly surprised at the very few complaints as crews crisscrossed the county.

"That's pretty good," said County Administrator Kyle Oldre. "We hit just about every mile of the county."

Hulcher said those residents who signed up for the FTTP service earlier this year will receive letters when installations begin in their areas.

"Installation crews then meetcustomersattheirhomes at the scheduled times and connect the services," he said.

Luverne seniors address middle school students Tuesday, Nov. 22, at an assembly for "Click Away From Chaos." The seniors showed a video and explained instances where clicking away from offensive images on the Internet shows good character. The seniors, along with organizer Phil Olson from Sioux Falls, also presented a similar message to fourth- and fifth-graders. The five will present their message to community leaders at a February 2017 meeting.

Below right, Luverne Middle School students TaJauhn Hipkins (left) and Damon Susie show the polished stones they received after the assembly. Elementary and middle school students received polished stones that they were encouraged to carry in their pockets for the next two weeks. The stones are to remind students that actions taken on social media can help polish their character or leave them rough around the edges. Local sponsors of the program included Luverne Area Chamber, Papik Motors, Main Street Financial and Minnwest Bank.

down to the areas of agriculture, business, industrial technology and career and consumer science. Very few high schools have all those options, according to a recent survey of area high schools.

"We are trying to grow something we sadly let slip away," said Tom Hoff, the SWCSC facilitator.

Data presented at previous meetings show the need for courses whose primary goal is to prepare students for college.

Vocational education develops marketable skills by the time a student graduates from high school. State data shows 28 percent of high school students choose to enter the workforce immediately after high school.

Similarly businesses are looking for these workers.

Pilot program paves way

The Minnesota Depart-

out, Hoff added.

The class is open to 25 students from the partnering schools with each district paying a per pupil tuition fee to cover the instructor and material costs.

Hoff said its success and expansion will depend on the pilot program as well as continued local school support.

"We are hoping we can hold enough of these cluster of schools together to make this happen," Hoff said. "We feel we are making process — just not as fast as we want."

Student survey indicates vocational interest

If results from a recent survey of local high school students are any indication, career and technical education will be making a comeback in southwest Minnesota.

The SWCSC survey asked 845 ninth-through 12th-grade students in Luverne, Adrian, Edgerton, Ellsworth, Hills-Beaver Creek and Pipestone their likeliness to enroll in a hands-on vocational exploration class.

ment of Education is funding a pilot project that could influence how the local vocational education class is operated.

Granite Falls' Minnesota WestCampuswillofferthefirst collaborative Introduction to Medical and Health Careers class in January among partnering school districts in central Minnesota.

"We found out we can't go back to the old days where every school has their own career and technical education. The best way to grow is a collaborative effort," Hoffsaid at the Nov. 3 meeting in Luverne.

Granite Falls will use a "flipped classroom" concept where lectures and lessons would take place outside the two days a week the students meet at the college. Meeting days would be reserved for hands-on instruction, he said.

Other days would involve students in job shadowing, internships or in interactive classroom settings, although plans are still being worked They chose one of four responses to each of the 15 vocational education fields. Response choices were definitely yes, maybe, not likely or never.

Medical and health careers garnered the most interest with more than a third (278 responses) of the student body indicating "definitely yes" to enrolling in the class. An additional 217 students indicated possible interest.

Even the career with the lowest interest (alternative energy) attracted 46 students definitely interested and 156 maybe interested.

As a collaborative effort, vocational options would have to start small in order to address finding qualified instructors, transportation and meeting locations for the classes.

'Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry'

By Mavis Fodness

Fans of author J. K. Rowling's Harry Potter character gathered recently at the Rock County Community Library for an evening of everything Hogwarts.

Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry is one of the main locales for Rowling's seven books and eight subsequent movies.

The library transformed its basement into the school for wizards complete with floating candles and delectable treats including mandrakes, which are shaped like human beings.

"It was a great night," said library director Serena Gutnik. "It was such a huge success."

If numbers alone measured success, 53 adults, teenagers and children attended the event. Many chose to attend in costume, which was optional for all participants.

Acceptance letters to attend the school were sent to all of those who signed up for the event, much like in the story of Harry Potter.

In the library's version, its elevator was transformed into train platform 9¾, which took the new students to the transformed basement. Each participant chose one of Hogwarts' four houses to play the trivia games.

Gutnik said plans began this summer for the Harry Potter Trivia Night with trivia questions coming from a library director in New York.

Questions based on the books as well as the movies ranged from geographical locations to spells and potions to timeline Harry Potter happenings. The activity introduced community residents to more of the library's offerings.

The activity was also multi-generational – mixing grandparents with college students and children and parents.

The next trivia night is already in the works, based on the mid-1980s television show "Golden Girls."

The event will take place early next year, Gutnik said.

Grocery store discounts put math-challenged Dutch girl in bargain-hunting quandary language and my grammar is (mostly) flawless.

It's come in handy for things like school term papers, scholarship essays, job resumes and, of course, my career in news writing and editing.

But if you buy into the "leftbrain, right-brain" theory of intellectual biology, you know that effective communicators often struggle with simple math.

We can compose a story problem with perfect sentence structure; just don't ask us to solve the problem without scratch paper.

So, as easy as it is to communicate, we "left-brain" leaners flounder in the world of numbers.

Just ask my Music Boosters friends.

I'll volunteer in any capacity for any fundraiser - bake cookies, unload a truck, supervise students and perform many other tasks.

But you won't see me making change at the concessions counter. Breaking a $50 bill for a $7.63 purchase puts me in a cold sweat.

Not because I can't do it, but because it requires concentration and accuracy in a distracting social setting among friends (who are quick to tease me about my poor math).

And so we left-brainers survive in life communicating our way out of tight spots. For bachelor's degrees we take statistics, logic or even geography (which requires calculating distances) to satisfy the math requirements of our liberal arts education.

to mean something before the days of Google.

And we bring our calculators to difficult places like grocery stores where prices are often presented in trick questions

In the produce aisle, for example, you never know how much a single apple costs because apples are sold by the pound. Which makes sense, I suppose, because some apples are larger and heavier than others.

But colored peppers are sold in singles, even though their sizes vary greatly. What really puts me in a tailspin, though, is the beverage aisle, where there are 2-liter bottles, six-packs of 20-ounce bottles and 12-packs of cans, along with 8-packs of smaller plastic bottles.

So, the math problem that got me last week was: What's the better deal — the three 12-packs of 12-ounce cans for $10, a 20-pack of 12-ounce cans for $4.99, four 6-packs of 24-ounce bottles for $10 or three 8-packs of 12-ounce bottles for $9?

The easy answer? Don't drink pop; it's bad for you.

But if you must, perhaps with a cocktail, and if you're Dutch like I am, it might pay to do the math before you stock

Polished stones are not for throwing but polishing social media use

Parents may have found polished stones in their students' pockets last week.

The thumb-sized rocks came in various shades of blue, green, yellow and red. They were shiny, smooth and a reminder of the message Luverne and Hills-Beaver Creek fourth- through eighth-graders heard during last week's "Click Away from Chaos" assemblies.

At each of the assemblies four local senior students made the presentation along with Sioux Falls facilitator Philip Olson.

The students presented ways the underclassmen could polish their character in our social media world.

They were told to "click away" from adult images on the Internet with a reminder there are plenty of good images to view and share.

The older students also talked about not writing statements they wouldn't tell a person face-to-face. They gave examples of appropriate statements to be shared with friends and family.

Polished stones were given to the elementary and middle school students as a reminder to strive to make decisions that help polish their character instead of making decisions that could leave them rough around the edges.

Students were encouraged to keep the stones in their pockets for two weeks.

The stone's smooth, polished feel reminds them to steer away from inappropriate websites or the posting of personal messages on social media sites that may roughen their character. Character may come into question if potential employers or college admissions representatives viewed the personal posts.

These are messages the students have heard from adults, but educators have found younger students listen differently when their local peers share the do's and don'ts of social media and the Internet.

We, as adults, can learn a lot from the Polished Stone Project.

Sometimes we also become too involved with social media and need to step away.

Instead of throwing away the rocks found in the jeans pockets or rolling around in the washer, parents should ask their students about the rocks.

Parents should ask their students to explain what they learned and why they want to keep their stones (character) polished.

Young and old alike can take that message to heart as we use social media. Think about your posts, and phrase sentences that won't inflict animosity toward another person or hurt another person's feelings.

Also point out others' inappropriate use of social media, and by all means, don't pass along or share those sharp messages.

Most of all, let's keep our stones polished.

Preferred term is 'crash' when referring to driving errors

Q: As a traffic safety official, I am very upset that people don't realize that there is some significance as to what is going on with using the term "crash" as compared to using the word "accident" in news articles and other media. I see both terms used and I personally know that there is some intentionality about this.

I know that you use the word crash for a reason, so can you do an article about this issue so that we can get everyone on the same page?

A: This issue stems from a court trial over a decade ago that involved the intentional ramming of a police vehicle, which resulted in the death of a police officer. During the trial, an attorney mentioned that the incident was referred to by police in their reports as an "accident." It also was reported by police on an "accident" ASK A TROOPER report form, thus it was argued that the incident was not intentional and charges should be dismissed.

By Sgt. Troy Christianson, Minnesota State Patrol

Since that time, traffic safety officials in the state have been educating citizens regarding the difference between the words "crash" and "accident." We know that human driving error causes the vast majority of crashes and are therefore preventable. Since these crashes are not accidents, we must use the correct term to define them.

Toward Zero Deaths (TZD) program officials and local traffic safety coalitions have worked on this issue in all regions of the state. This effort continues at the Department of Public Safety, in particular the Office of Traffic Safety. Spokespersons at the Minnesota Department of Transportation (MnDOT) also use the term "crash."

Although we continue to emphasize the word "crash," the media frequently refers to them as accidents. This may be primarily due to the fact that they have grown up hearing crashes called "car accidents." If everyone gets into the habit of using the word "crash" instead of "accident," we will all be on the same page regarding this traffic safety term.

You can avoid a ticket - and a crash — if you simply buckle up, drive at safe speeds, pay attention and always drive sober. Help us drive Minnesota Toward Zero Deaths.

If you have any questions concerning traffic-related laws or issues in Minnesota, send your questions to Sgt. Troy Christianson – Minnesota State Patrol at 2900 48th Street NW, Rochester, MN 55901-5848. (Or reach him at, Troy.Christianson@state.mn.us).

Biren: We can do more to prevent teen tobacco use

To the Editor:

Like my colleagues around the state, I was ecstatic to learn that the smoking rate among teenagers is falling to record low levels, according to the Minnesota Student Survey results.

However, this great news from the Minnesota Student Survey is tempered by some very serious findings that we need to address head on.

First, while the teen smoking rates have fallen to new lows of 8 percent of 11th-graders, this still means tens of thousands of Minnesota kids regularly smoke cigarettes.

Second, the tobacco industry's ploy of using menthol, fruit and candy-flavored products to appeal to young people is working. The survey found that 35 percent of teen tobacco users use menthol and 40 percent use some other flavor, like grape, cotton candy or pineapple.

Third, the use of e-cigarettes is extremely widespread. Nearly one in five high school juniors report using an e-cigarette in the past 30 days. We don't know the long-term health effects of e-cigarettes. We do know that the aerosol they emit has been shown to contain heavy metals, formaldehyde and other carcinogens. And it contains nicotine, which is highly addictive and dangerous to teen brain development.

We can do more to prevent teens from using tobacco products and we need to do it. Steps proven to work include keeping tobacco prices high, raising the age to purchase tobacco, and restricting the sale of flavored products.

You can find out more about ways to foster a smoke-free generation at smokefreegenmn.org.

Out with the old ...

City workers clear old appliances, furniture and debris out of the former Culligan building on North Highway 75 near Main Street Wednesday, Nov. 23, to prepare it for demolition. The city purchased the building from Randy Sasker earlier this year for the purpose of clearing blight and encouraging new development. The dilapidated house to the north of the Culligan building is also scheduled for demolition. The Culligan offices moved to Main Street into the former Palace Video building, and the Ramage house, as it's known, has been vacant for a number of years.

By Mavis Fodness

Luverne seventh-grader Mia Wenzel knows the $10 beaded bracelet she purchased two months ago had a positive impact on an African family.

She and 24 other student council members and two adults attended the WE Day conference in late September.

WE Day in the Twin Cities Excel Center celebrates youth making a difference in the local and global communities.

"My mind just exploded," Wenzel said about the conference. "I can do so many things that can have an impact - and I am just in middle school."

The student council members said they were drawn to the "We Are Rafikis" project after watching a pair of Kenyan warriors at the conference.

Once home, the Luverne students did their own research and concluded selling the Rafiki (Swahili for friend) bracelets would have a positive global impact.

"I know a lot of people in Kenya are starving," said eighth-grader and council member Brodi Oakley.

She purchased a green Rafiki bracelet after the warriors' presentation, knowing her money helped provide food for a Kenyan family.

Oakley said food is one of five pillars talked about at the conference and central to service learning.

Bracelets can be purchased for $10 each through Dec. 8

Each child needs five pillars in their lives in order to break the cycle of poverty within their families. The other pillars are education, health, opportunity and water.

Wenzel purchased a Rafiki bracelet supporting water. Her support supplied a Kenyan family with 30 days of reliable water source to drink, bathe and cook.

She wears the bracelet of tiny blue beads almost every day as a reminder.

"It reminds me that I helped a kid," she said. "It was just one month but I bet it made a big impact in his life."

On the back of each Rafiki package is a code for the WE.org website to track the donation's impact.

As the student council conducts the in-school fundraiser, they are also able to expand the fundraiser to the Luverne community due to the free shipping option.

For $10 community members can choose one of 17 different bracelet designs supporting a pillar.

The pillars are separated according to color: blue supports water, red supports health, green supports food, purple supports opportunity and tan supports education. Order forms can be found on the Luverne Middle School's Facebook page. Checks to LMS and the order form can be dropped off at the middle/high school office.

Deadline for ordering is Thursday, Dec. 8. Orders may take three weeks to arrive.

The rafiki bracelets are made out of 48-inch stretchy cord thread and the colorful glass beads. They are assembled by Kenyan artisans and can also be worn as a necklace, anklet bracelet or headband.

Half of the $10 cost goes directly to a Kenyan family and the other half goes toward the LMS WE Act campaign.

This year the students chose to donate money toward health care for residents in Haiti.

Last year the students focused on the education pillar for Haitian children.

For more information contact student council adviser Becky Rahm at LMS, 507-283-4491, or by email b.rahm@isd2184.org.

Earlier this year the council's We Act campaign conducted a local food drive, challenging the Pipestone middle school students to donate food to their local food shelves.

The friendly competition raised more than 1,000 items between the Luverne and Pipestone food banks.

"They were very much appreciated," Rahm shared on the LMS Facebook page.

Capt. Geo. W. Fried, who has been stationed at Kodiak, Alaska, for the past several months, returned to Luverne Tuesday evening from Fort Lewis, Washington, where he had been relieved from the active military service and transferred to the inactive list because of the War Department's recently adopted policy establishing age limits for officers in the several grades. Capt. Fried is 46 years of age and the maximum age limit for captains serving with troops is set at 42 years.

Officers placed in the inactive group are subject to recall to the service in case of a major emergency.

•To have their car turn turtle and to be held prisoners under it for fifteen or twenty minutes was the rather harrowing experience of B.F. Woodrow and Miss Eunice late Wednesday afternoon of last week while returning from Pipestone, where Miss Woodrow teaches school.

The accident happened about three and a half miles northwest of Hardwick. Mr. Woodrow was traveling at about fifteen miles an hour, when the car struck a bump or a rut in the road. The resultant jolt jarred one of his hands from the steering wheel and the hand struck the throttle, thereby greatly increasing the speed of the car as it swerved to one side straight for the ditch.

said Holtz, who hasn't yet had a chance to try it out on actual snow accumulations, "But it's something that we'll have to wait until we use it to see."

With all the extra electronics involved, merely hooking it up to send it out is a big job, let alone driving down the road with a blade deployed.

That's why he's spent several weeks training to use it, and he's now training another driver to be his backup tow-plow driver.

"The only thing that scares me is how the motoring public will respond," Holtz said, referring to his new, two-lane width.

Standing in the MnDOT parking lot in Luverne, he pointed out that the new equipment has several wellplaced strobe lights, but he knows motorists aren't used to snow plows using two lanes at a time.

When asked what he'd like the motoring public to know about the new system, Holtz said, "Be careful. Once we get out there it will be a whole different world."

MnDOT acquired its first tow plow in 2007 in the Metro area. Since then they've been deployed in Rochester, St. Cloud and Duluth, and most recently Luverne.

A tow plow essentially does the work of an additional plow truck driver, so the equipment is helping to fill an operational shortage of snowplow trucks statewide

State officials say the tow plow doesn't equally replace a fully outfitted tandem axle snowplow truck, but they estimate the state saves $38,000 in operational costs per year per tow plow.

Here'showitbreaksdown: Each tow plow costs $128,000 but it costs $19 less A new tow plow costs $128,000, but the annual savings from one tow plow is $38,000, compared with a traditional tandem axel snowplow on 2,000 lane miles traveled.

per lane mile to run a tow plow than an additional plow truck. A standard tandem axle snowplow truck costs $22 per lane mile to operate, versus just $3 per lane mile for a trailered tow plow.

This factors in maintenance, fuel, capital costs, labor, etc. An identical amount of de-icing material is applied by the traditional option, so material costs are not factored into this comparison.

This said, the annual savings from one tow plow is $38,000, (based on 2,000 lane miles traveled).

Considering 13 tow plows in the state, the annual savings is $490,000.

Operators do point out, however, that tow plows cannot be used for every weather event.

They are not effective for certain conditions, including when there's less than one inch of snow, when compaction is occurring and during transitions from freezing rain to snow.

"I'd much rather have snow this time of year than rain, because we all know what happens when it freezes on the road," Holtz said.

South Dakota transportation officials are reportedly also considering tow plows over the state border.

Mild weather conditions greeted visitors Friday at Blue Mounds State Park where 70 vehicles took advantage of the free admission as an alternative to spending the entire day shopping the Black Friday sales. Black Friday free pass popular at Blue Mounds

Looking for bison instead of shopping for gifts was the preferred activity for the Leibold and Ketchpaw families during Black Friday.

Entrance fees to all 76 Minnesota state parks were waived the day after Thanksgiving to encourage people to spend more time outdoors and with family.

The day after Thanksgiving is the first day of traditional holiday shopping, which draws huge crowds to special store offers. Nancy Cameron and Jim Leibold traveled from the Twin Cities and spent Thanksgiving with their daughter and son-in-law in Brookings.

The foursome headed outdoors the following day specificallytovisitastatepark for free. This year the group chose the Blue Mounds State Park to view the bison.

"It's not something we get to see every day," said daughter Julie Leibold, adding "It's a great day to be outside."

Temperatures Friday were mild, in the mid-30s, with sunny skies and light winds.

Seventy vehicles entered the park north of Luverne for the $5 per vehicle fee waiver, according to park official Tom Sawtelle.

"This time of year we might get 15 on a Friday," he said.

This is the second year Minnesota has offered a free day pass to its state parks.

Defending section hockey champs take loss, tie in season's first week

By John Rittenhouse

The Luverne girls' hockey team opened the 2016-17 season by playing a pair of Big South Conference games last week.

The Cardinals dropped a two-goal decision in New Ulm to open the campaign Nov. 2. The Cards skated to a draw during their home opener against St. Peter-Le Sueur-Henderon-Tri-City United Friday.

Luverne, 0-1-1, skates in Windom Thursday.

LHS 1, SP-L-H-TCU 1

The Cardinals and the Bulldogs broke even during Luverne's home opener at the Blue Mound Ice Arena Friday.

Luverne scored its first goal of the season in the game's second period to gain a 1-0 advantage, but SP-L-H-TCU knotted the score at one in the final stanza and the score remained deadlocked after the teams skated to a scoreless draw during an eight-minute overtimes session.

Luverne gained a 1-0 edge when Madison Crabtree poked the puck off a rebound from a shot on goal by Mariah Aukes at the 10:23 mark of the second period.

The Bulldogs answered with 9:47 remaining in the third period, when Whitney Weick scored after being set up by Maggie Ringler.

The visitors sported a 48-33 advantage in shots on goal in the contest.

Emilie Bartels made 47 saves in goal for the Cards, while Jordan Keeley stopped 32 shots for the Bulldogs.

New Ulm 2, LHS 0

The Cardinals opened the 2016-17 season by taking on defending Big South Conference champion New Ulm on the Eagles' home ice Nov. 22.

New Ulm controlled play by outshooting Luverne 57-15 in the contest, but the Cardinals kept the game interesting by limiting the Eagles to a pair of goals during a 2-0 loss.

Both of New Ulm's goals came during even-strength situations.

Ali Beltz opened the scoring at the 10:55 mark of the first period after being set up by Molly Lauren Klein.

The teams skated to a scoreless draw in the second period before the Eagles registered an insurance goal in the final stanza.

Beltz scored her second goal of the game with 3:44 left to play with an assist going to Molly Scheid.

Bartels turned in a 55-save performance in the net for the Cards.

Luverne girls are getting what they need from veteran goalie

It's too early to tell if the Luverne girls' hockey team can repeat as the Section 3A champion.

LHS is a much different team from last winter, when the Cardinals featured a potent offense with a lot of explosive players who could put the puck in the net on a consistent basis.

Luverne probably won't be a high-scoring team in 2016-17, but I have a hunch the Cards will be in a position to win a lot of games because they have a solid goalie in junior Emilie Bartels.

Bartels was nothing short of spectacular when the

FROM THE SIDELINES

By John Rittenhouse, sports editor

Cardinals opened the season by playing a pair of Big South Conference games last week, and LHS will be counting on more of the same throughout the year.

"Emilie is a key figure in our defense," said LHS assistant coach Tanner Skattum, a former goalie who has worked with Bartels the past three seasons.

"We lost a lot of our goal scorers last year, so we'll need to rely on our defense a lot more this year and Emilie is a big part of it." Bartels has proven she is up to the challenge at this point.

She made 55 saves during the season opener in New Ulm Nov. 22.

The Eagles are the defending BSC champions and outshot LHS 57-15 in a game that could have turned into a lopsided contest.

Bartels and defensemen Carly Serie, Regan Feit and Brynn Thier simply didn't let that happen.

LHS limited New Ulm to a pair of goals during a 2-0 loss.

Luverne was equally impressive on defense during Friday's home opener against St. Peter-Le Sueur-Henderson-Tri-City United.

The Cardinals were outshot 48-33 in the game against the Bulldogs, but the contest didn't end in defeat.

Bartels made 47 saves in net to help LHS preserve a 1-1 deadlock.

"Emilie is a junior now and she is playing with a lot of confidence," Skattum said. "I think a lot of it (the confidence she is displaying) is carrying over from last year. She worked hard over the summer, attending two or three different camps. If she keeps on doing what she's doing now, it will be a key to our season."

What Bartels is doing right now is following Skattum's instruction.

Skattum wants his net-minder to control the rebounds off the shots she faces and cover up the puck when possible to limit second and third opportunities for opposing forwards. "Along with being confident, Emilie is a lot more mature now," Skattum said. "We've talked about her role on this team and she is filling it very well. If she can keep on controlling rebounds and covering the puck, she definitely will help us steal a couple of wins against the better teams we play this year."

If the Cards can steal enough wins this year to secure a good seed, I wouldn't be surprised to see them playing for the section title in late February.

A team doesn't need to score a lot of goals to be successful, especially when it plays stout defense and has a confident goalie in net.

Stop, listen, hear the angels sing

"It Came Upon a Midnight Clear" is a classic Christmas song. Edmund Sears wrote the poem on a cold December day in 1849. He was deeply concerned about the state of the world around him. There was much upheaval and many tensions. Sears himself had just recently emerged from a time of ill health brought on by over work at his previous parish. It was December and the days were getting shorter.

Yet, Sears felt he had a duty to offer a word of hope. His thoughts turned to the Christmas Gospel in Luke 2: the announcement of the angels to the shepherds about a Savior born and peace and good will. "Peace on the earth, goodwill to men, from heaven's all gracious King!"

The poem Sears wrote would become a beloved Christmas song. Sears wrote five verses. People have frequently sung only four, with the middle verse often omitted: Yet with the woes of sin and strife/The world has suffered long;/Beneath the angel strain have rolled/ Two thousand years of wrong;/And man, at war with man, hears not/The love-song which they bring;/O hush the noise, ye men of strife/And hear the angels sing.

The poem is about the song the angels sing. We are called to stop, listen, and hear. "O hush the noise and hear the angels sing" is almost an echo of Psalm 46: "Be still and know that I am God ... " Will we hear the song this year? The angels are singing, but yet the world has a hard time hearing. The constancy of noise, conflict and sin keep the song from being heard. "The woes of sin and strife" have continued. So, what can we do?

BUILT ON A ROCK

By Pastor Jason Cunningham, First Presbyterian Church, Luverne

1. Take time to listen. The good news of the Gospel is that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners. He died and rose again. We sometimes have a hard time hearing the message of peace, goodwill, born unto you a Savior. As Christmas nears, take time to hear God's Word and especially the Christmas message of Luke 2.

2. Make peace in our own lives if there is a place of strife. We can be easily overwhelmed, but take a step where you can. The song and message of Christmas is one of reconciliation and bringing together. Find a way to be a peacemaker.

3. Believe the message of Christmas has power today. Every year in December you hear tales about choirs going into Malls or other public places looking like ordinary shoppers. Suddenly, they will start singing a Christmas song or, most often, the "Hallelujah" chorus. They bring the true message and joy of Christmas into a season where there is much hustle, bustle, frustration, and "scrooginess." The song can be heard!

"The grace of God has now been revealed through the appearing of our Savior. Christ Jesus. who has destroyed death and has brought life and immortality to light through the gospel." (2 Timothy 1:10)

CARDS OF THANKS

Thank you so much to the many people that expressed their condolences, thoughts, and prayers to us at the time of our mother's passing. She was a wonderful mother , grandmother, and great-grandmother and while we will miss her greatly we have such peace knowing that she knew her Lord and Savior and is now with Jesus and our dad. The stories and remembrances you have shared will be cherished forever. We never quite realized how many lives mom touched to deeply. Very special thanks to everyone at Good Samaritan Home and Ridgeview. You provide such wonderful care and particularly meeting the spiritual needs of everyone. Truly, you perform, "In Christ;s love, everyone is someone." We were so pleased to know mom was in such wonderful hands during the last 12 years both at Ridgeview and Good Sam. Special thanks to Dr. Christensen, his staff, and all those at the Pipestone Medical Center. You gave mom great healthcare and in such a loving manner. Thanks also to Pastor Judy and her fellow members at Peace United Methodist Church where mom was a member her entire 97+ years. We also appreciate the fine service of the Hartquist family in providing such a thoughtful service for mom's visitation and funeral. Pipestone is a wonderful community and we thank you all.
