Residents recall the 1991 Halloween blizzard

By Glenda McGaffee The Halloween blizzard of 1991 still stands as a benchmark blizzard in Minnesota that other storms are compared with.

October blizzards in Minnesota are rare but have happened in the past. The most severe early blizzard on record for Minnesota was the devastating Oct. 16, 1880, storm.

The storm left behind drifts of snow 20 feet high in the Canby area and brought train traffic to a standstill over western Minnesota until the spring thaw. The winter is vividly porthaw. The winter is vividly por-- trayed in Laura Ingalls Wilder's trayed in Laura Ingalls Wild book, "The Long Winter."

According to the State Climatology Office in the University of Minnesota, the Halloween blizzard of 1991 is one of those weather events when people can recall what they were doing as it unfolded.

Folks were still celebrating the Minnesota Twins' second World Series win in just four years when a cold front ushered in unseasonable cold air.

The high temperature in the Twin Cities was 65 degrees on the 29th, over 10 degrees above normal.

On Oct. 30 the high temperature in the Twin Cities only reached 32 degrees. By this time a low pressure area was developing around Galveston, Texas.

From the seasoned vet erans at the National Weather Service to students studying meteorology at St. Cloud State, there was no secret that a large storm was coming.

Most forecasts for Oct. 31 for for central Minnesota called for a cold rain by afternoon, possibly heavy.

The primary question at the time was how much rain would fall.

As Halloween dawned back in 1991, some wintery weather was anticipated, but no one was expecting a blizzard.

Meet your neighbor: Opheims crazy about Halloween

By Glenda McGaffee
Marie Opheim's favorite holiday of the year is Halloween. Shelovesto decorateherhome in Hills on 413 East 4th Street inside and out since her marriage to Mark in 2008.

Every year she chooses a theme, and this year's is "Spiders and Skeletons."
"Every year since 2008 I add something different to my Halloween decorations. I have totes filled, but every year I buy something new," Opheim said.
"I start decorating the first week of October. Halloween is such an awesome holiday. It's for everybody; you don't have to be a kid. This is the only holiday everybody can be a kid. Just put onfacepaintand stop atmyhouse on Halloween and I will give you candy."

When asked abouther favorite Halloween movies, she said, "Hocus Pocus, the 1993 movie

The National Weather Service issued a winter storm watch at 4 a.m. on the Oct. 31, with a potential of a foot of snow. The first inkling that the forecast under-projected snowfall totals came when precipitation started falling as snow at about 11:30 a.m. in the Twin Cities, much earlier than anticipated.

With the realization that the precipitation would be snow, not rain, a winter storm warning was issued during the day by the National Weather Service in the Twin Cities, and forecasters realized there was the potential for a lot of snow

As the afternoon faded into evening, a surreal scene unfolded with kids attempting to trick-or-treat wearing coats and boots, and pumpkins became covered with a snowy blanket. By midnight 8.2 inches of snow fell at the Twin Cities International Airport, the most for the entire month of October on record for the Twin Cities.

Hills and Beaver Creek residents remember the 1991 Halloween blizzard.

Wayne Ward, Hills city maintenance man in 1991 said, "The snow was so heavy the tractor had to go ahead of the truck to make a path. Cargill also came into town with their payloader to assist."

Ron Rauk, Beaver Creek, said, "I remember taking my kids out trick-or-treating and they did not want to come home."

The storm covered a large portion of the state of Minnesota. Former Hills residents Stan and Sharon Hup were building a new home in Waseca. Sharon said, "The construction crew had to stop building for a month due to the storm. We received 12 inches of snow"

Stephanie Stensland from Pipestone, a friend of Hills residents Samantha McGaffee and Colton Bass, was a blizzard baby. Stensland arrived Friday, Nov. 1, 10 days before she was due to enter the world.

Stensland was born at Fairmont Community Hospital. Her parents drove 30 minutes from their home in Granada in 50 mph winds and blinding snow to reach the hospital. Three doctors tried and failed to make it there before their arrival.

The first two ditched their cars in snow banks, and the third, Peter Lanchiewicz, got his neighbor to bring him to the delivery room on a snowmobile. Stensland was born 10 minutes later.

Author's note:

I researched my diary entry for Oct. 31. All evening events were cancelled by 4 p.m. At our house 50 trick-or-treaters came that evening. The storm continued through the next day with blowing snow and very cold temperatures. We received 10 inches of snow.

October is National Bullying Prevention Month

By Glenda McGaffee

Hills-Beaver Creek schools are participating in activities to bring attention to the subject that has gained much attention in the past few years.

October has been designated as National Bullying Prevention Month.

Wednesday, Oct. 21, students at the high school and elementary school were asked to wear orange as a symbol of standing up to bullying.

According to Bullying Prevention governmentsources, parentshave the responsibility to be aware of what is going on with their children.

More information regarding bullying can be found at http://www.stopbullying.gov
"Being aware, observant and engaging your child in conversation about relationships and involvement at school is a key to gaining insight into your child's experiences," the website states.

Bullying may not always be easily identifiable, experts say

Bullying involves physical or emotional harm, which includes name-calling, fighting, hitting, indirectly through gossiping, or other forms of cyber bullying.

It is important to monitor your child's activities on social media sites," the website states.

Ready or not, flu season is here

By Ruth Weitgenant, R.N.
Infection control coordinator
Tuff Memorial Home
Here we go again ... time to decide whether or not to get a flu shot. I don't need one this year, do I? Last year the flu shot didn't work anyway. I think I'll just skip it. I'm tired of the sore arm. After all, I could get the flu from the shot, couldn't I?

Think again.
According to the CDC, the flu shot is the main way to prevent influenza.

Influenza is often called the "flu." But we must not take it lightly. Influenza kills thousands every year. The very old and very young are especially at risk.

You get that "hit by a truck" feeling with a high fever, body aches and a cough. As you age your immune system doesn't work as well and the flu shot is not as effective in the elderly.

This is where the Tuff Memorial Home comes in. Flu shots are given to almost the entire facility, residents and staff alike. One way to protect Grandma and Grandpa is to get the flu shot. That way they won't get the flu from you next time you visit them.

But what if I get the flu from the flu shot? Yes, this is an old wives' tale. The flu vaccine is a dead virus so it's impossible to get the flu from the shot. You may get a sore arm for a short period of time and some mild body aches but it's worth it to prevent the flu.

The flu vaccine isn't 100 percent effective. Every year experts take an educated guess as to which flu strains will be around. Then they make the flu vaccine to cover these strains. Last year experts stated that the flu vaccine was only 50 to 60 percent effective.

But this is much better than no protection from the flu. If you do get the flu, experts say that it won't be as severe if you had the vaccine.

So the choice is yours. Do you want to take a chance with the nasty flu bug? Or do you want to protect yourself and your family with a simple flu shot?

If you do decide to get your flu shot, we at the Tuff Memorial Home want to thank you for helping us to stay healthy.

Catch Phrase

All writers have words or phrases they like to use a little too much. It's human nature and I'm probably guilty of it too. Ummm. Close the gate? As a book reader, once you pick up on it, I think it almost becomes a little game to see how many times you count it in one book.

I had some time while the hubster was in the hospital to read. Really read. Real, genuine, swipe the page on the Kindle App books. I have some friends who read practically non-stop and others who listen to books on CD as they drive, walk, or what have you. I have gotten some of my information from them for this column.

The author of the Dexter books, Jeff Lindsay, has a thing about lizard brains. Dexter was a series on Showtime TV that lasted eight seasons. Lizard brains are referred to so many times in the book that they finally incorporated the phrase into the series ... in the seventh season of the show, which aired in 2012. It became a running joke and, if you were a Dexter fan, you could almost see the actors trying to hold back their laughter when they had to say it. I really liked the show. I'm not sure if it's a good thing or a bad thing to like a show about a man who solves crimes by day as a forensics expert and commits them by night as a serial killer. I never did get to see the finale to find out if he ever got caught. I'll have to check up on that sometime.

I remember a book where practically all the characters at one time or another did "smile ruefully." Ruefully? I finally had to look it up to see just what kind of a smile it was. It is a smile that feels sorry for someone or has some remorse or guilt associated with it. Must have been a murder mystery. I can't remember the story line or the author at all, but the catch phrase stuck in my mind

Sometimes the phrase represents an action. One of them is heel spinning. Women are always spinning on their heels to walk away from something in some books. It always seems to follow after they've dished out some catty insult. I wish I could walk around in the real world like that - constantly spinning on my heels. With my luck a heel would snap off in mid spin and I would find myself with a broken ankle.

Sometimes the repeated factor is a favorite piece or type of clothing. There is a series of books my friend Daphene read where it seemed like every other page contained someone in a silk shirt. She pointed it out to me and, once I noticed it, I couldn't un-see it. It seemed every other page contained someone wearing a silk shirt. These books were written and based in the 2000s. Who the heck wears silk shirts? The last one I owned was in the early 1990s and, though it was all the rage then, it was a pain to take care of.

Seriously, do you remember when you had a shirt like this? You loved it, right? I did There's no shame - admit it! I loved putting on that freshly pressed, wrinkle-free silk shirt and I was so proud of it with its brightly colored square patches. Though I'm not usually one for trendy anything, for some reason I went with that silk shirt. It felt rich, indulgent and extravagant and, now that I think about it, I miss it.

A pitiful gaze? A thoughtfu expression? A rigid demeanor? A threatening look? A quiver of expectation? Whatever. .. Every writer has their favorites, and no matter how hard you try not to use them too much, they somehow repeatedly type themselves into the content.

I'll don my silk shirt, smile ruefully and promptly spin on my heel,

As I close the gate and realize, it's all just part of the deal.

Happy Fall, ya'll, from the Tuff Memorial Home!

Residents started the week with beach ball babble and enjoyed answering questions as well as the exercise it provided. That afternoon residents played bingo, which was followed by Five Alive and one-to-one visits.

On most Tuesday mornings, residents join together for Tai Chi (pronounced Tie-Chee) and sing-a-long. It is such a joy to listen to the residents sing together during this room-packed activity. After Bible study with Pastor Fischer, residents played hangman and enjoyed afternoon coffee.

Residents enjoyed a fresh manicure Wednesday morning. That afternoon, they decorated pumpkins and finished the day with delicious pumpkin bars. The facility is looking ready for Halloween!

Thursday morning Father Tom came to the facility for Catholic mass. Residents joined together that afternoon for ghos bingo

Afterwards, Jo Aykens celebrated her birthday with residents and staff with birthday cake. Thank you, Jo, for your generosity.

Glenda read from "The Secret" on Friday morning. With only threechapters left, residents are hoping to find out what "the secret" is. A new book will start in November.

The Tuff Memorial Home welcomed new musical entertainment on Friday.

Jacob from Happy the Dog Ministries came and sanghymns and gospel songs for the monthly birthday party. His program was engaging and uplifting and we thank him for coming.

Saturday morning the piano students of Glenda McGaffee performed for the residents. We are so thankful for her students and the talents they shared with us. We welcome young performers of any age!

-There was some Halloween spirit in S&R Food Center on Tuesday, as some of the employees dressed up for the occasion. But it wasn't ghost and goblin costumes that were seen - Mrs Claus decided to make an early appearance and cook the Back Door dinner guests something special.

-The Hills Volunteer Fire Department answered a call to the Senior High School in Hills last Friday morning. Smoke was noticed in the corridor between the shop and the main portion of the old building. Upon investigation, it was noted that a fire was burning in the storage room, off the shop, just east of where the boys' dressing room used to be in the old building. It was found necessary to use water to extinguish the blaze

She bobbed it for Paramount's "MoonOverBurma," you'llrecall. Instantly the studio's publicity departmentrequested the make up department to save the shorn locks; they knew that thousands ofrequests for alock of Dorothy's hair would pour in.

-Hallowe'en Party. The fac ulty of the public school entertained the pupils of the high school at the home of Dr. F.A Engstrom last Saturday evening Upon their arrival at the house the guests were received by two ghosts, and the funwas on. There were contests of allkinds such as pin juggling, cracker eating contest, string eating contest, animal sculptor contest with chewing gum, hat laugh, diving for apples in a tub of water, etc.

This weekend the weather was beautiful and I had the opportunity to attend several events.

Saturday morning 16 of my piano students performed a Halloween piano recital in the Tuff MemorialHome. The chapelwas filled to capacity with students, family, friends and residents of the nursing home. Some of the songs performed were "Zoom, Zoom, Witches Broom," "Mr. Cat" "One Scary Night" and ry Night" and the Piano Playing Skelton. The students did a fa was very proud.

Saturday afternoon I was invited by my friend Diana Buffington to attend the Sanford Hospice 12th annual Tour of Tables uncheon at the Blue Mound Banquet Center in Luverne.

This event is a fundraiser for hospice and includes a tour of tables, basket auction and raffle. The menu was cranberry pecan chicken salad on a croissant, tomato tortellini soup, cheesecake, coffee and punch The fundraiser was designated with the proceeds used toward installing patient lift equipment in the cottage

The banquet hall was filled with a total of twenty-five decorated tables. I had the pleasure of sitting at a table designed by the Nutrition and Food Services Department at Sanford Hospital with Diana Buffington and Sherri Wieneke as hostesses. The theme for the table was "To flake or not to flake - that is the question." Silver, blue and white snowflakes adorned the table along with other holiday decorations.

A reverie harp was also on display. The harp is a small, lightweight, oval-shaped wooden instrument with no sharp edges, made to easily fit in a person's lap. It can be plucked or strummed with one's fingers. Because of its tuning, it sounds good even when the person playing it has never touched an instrument before.

Sunday was Reformation Day and Confirmation at the Bethlehem Lutheran Church in Hills. Josh Kueter, Dawson Leenderts, Trenton Bass, Halle Hoekstra, McKenna Westphal, Courtney Page and Cheyenne Albers were confirmed

I had the privilege of attending an open house in honor of McKenna's confirmation at her home. McKenna and her sister Joanna were my first piano students.

This week I have more recipes for your Halloween party. I wish everyone a happy and safe Halloween.

Zombie Fingers

Spiderweb Cookies

$1 / 2$ cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla extract 1 egg, beaten
13/4 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon baking soda $1 / 2$ teaspoon salt
$1 / 2$ cup chopped pecans or English walnuts
2 cups powdered sugar 2 to 3 tablespoons water Black decorator tube frosting

Toothpick

Beattogetherbutterormargarine and sugar until mixture is fluffy. Add vanilla and egg, blending well. Whisk flour, baking soda and salt; stir in nuts. Gradually add to butter mixture; beat well. Place dough on waxpaper; shape into 2longrolls, 2 inches in diameter. Chill overnight, or if desired, wrap and freeze for future use.
Slice dough 1/4 inch thick; bake on ungreased baking sheets at 400 degrees for about 7 minutes, until lightly golden. Cool.
Combine powdered sugar and enough water to make a thin frosting. Frost cookies. Before frosting has set, make circlesusingtheblack decorator tubefrosting. Add a dotin the center, if desired. Use the toothpick to pull the black frosting from the center to the edges, making the frosting look like spiderwebs. Let frosting dry before stacking.
